Farm Policies Defended as Buying Spur By Roosevelt

Says Aim Is to Build Up Purchasing Power Like Industry's.

Governor Allred Named as Judge

President Stands in the Rain as He Makes Texas Address.

Bumper Crops.

A wheat harvest of 967,412,000 bushels, the second largest on record, and an above-normal corn yield of 2,482,102,000 bushels were forecast yesterday by the Agriculture Department.

Precedent Is Set.

By the Associated Press.

Amarillo, Tex., July 11.—Soaked by a driving rain, President Roosevelt told a tremendous crowd here tonight that the Administration agricultural program was designed to apply "common sense business principles to the business of farming and cattle raising."

His defense of his farm policies came only a few hours after he had announced to a cheering Wichita Falls station crowd that he had appointed Gov. James V. Allred of Texas as a Federal district judge.

The crowd that greeted the Chief Executive here tonight in Ellwood Park could be compared only with that of more than 100,000 that greeted Mrs. Roosevelt at Amarillo's mother-in-law day last March. One of the side attractions in this gathering was "the world's largest band," with "Happy Homer" Rice, the director, counting some 5,000 musicians.

Sees Soil Permanency.

The President told his predominantly agricultural audience that "we need a greater permanency and greater annual security for those who use the soil."

The Administration farm program, Mr. Roosevelt said, is divided into three parts.

These are Government aid to farmers designed to help them use land for the products for which it is best fitted, the prevention of overproduction and low prices and a program to decrease tenancy, Mr. Roosevelt said.

As a part of the attempt to prevent overproduction and low prices the Chief Executive continued, "we seek to give farmers as high a purchasing power for their labor as those who work in industry and other occupations."

Names Three Candidates.

Mr. Roosevelt took occasion to mention the names of Representatives Marvin Jones, Lyndon Johnson and Maury Maverick, all of whom are seeking renomination. He did not mention Senator Tom Connally and Representative Hatton Sumners, opponents of his court plan, though they were present on his train.

Discussing the farm program, the President said he often had discussed with Jones, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, "the great objective of putting agriculture and cattle raising on a safe basis—giving assurances to those who engage in these pursuits that they will not be broke one year and flush the next."

Mr. Roosevelt said that "the farming and cattle raising population of the United States has no desire to be paid a subsidy or given

State Machine Oils Van Nuys Steamroller

Townsend and McNutt Organizations Planning to Push Senator's Renomination Through Democratic Convention Tomorrow Without a Roll-Call Vote Despite Wide-Spread Grumbling.

Oklahoma Votes Today.

Oklahoma votes today, the first of the States to act following a visit by President Roosevelt on his current tour. Chief interest is in the Democratic race for the Senate nomination, with Senator Elmer Thomas, Gov. E. W. Marland and Representative Gomer Smith the contenders.

Party Delegates Are Glum.

By Geoffrey Parsons Jr.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

Indianapolis, July 11.—The well oiled Democratic Statehouse machine ruled by Gov. M. Clifford Townsend and the powerful political organization that Paul V. McNutt left behind in Indiana to guard and nurse the McNutt-for-President boom while he served as high commissioner of the Philippines were all set tonight to steamroller the renomination of Senator Frederick Van Nuys through the Democratic State convention here tomorrow.

MINTON.

With their organization effectively if not happily reunited behind Senator Van Nuys, the Democratic leaders believed they had paved the way to indorse the Senator and name a slate of ten candidates for State offices without a roll call. Only two weeks ago, the same party steamroller was headed in a completely opposite direction, prepared to flatten Senator Van Nuys because his opposition to the Roosevelt court enlargment bill a year ago had aroused the resentment of two ardently pro-New Deal Indiana leaders—Gov. Townsend and Senator Sherman Minton.

TOWNSEND.

With Senator Van Nuys now an odds-on favorite to win re-election and lead the Democratic ticket into office next fall, tomorrow's convention might reasonably be expected to be an occasion for rejoicing among Indiana Democrats generally and particularly for the two men cast in the leading convention roles, Senator Minton as chairman and Gov. Townsend as keynoter. These two, however, face tomorrow's formalities glumly.

VAN NUYS.

Senator Minton confessed today that he was "very unhappy" that circumstances had forced Gov. Townsend to call off his "purge" of Senator Van Nuys.

"It is too late now, of course, to do anything about it," the Senator said. "There still remains a very Rope Saves 5 Trapped Atop Partly-Razed Ice Factory.

Eight firemen were injured yesterday combating a five-alarm fire which swept through the partly demolished American Ice Co. plant at Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest.

Five members of the force escaped death on the roof of the blazing structure when they slid 40 feet to the ground by rope and rain-pipe as flames suddenly raced through sawdust-filled insulation walls to undermine their position on the south side of the building.

De Valera Raises Eire's Flag Over Old British Fort

Spike Island, Cork Harbor, Ireland, July 10 (AP).—Prime Minister Eamon De Valera hoisted the green, white and gold banner of Ireland over Fort Spike Island today at a simple ceremony which marked the passing of British rule from south Ireland.

British troops turned over possession of the fort to Irish soldiers, marking completion of a part of the Anglo-Irish finance, trade and defense agreement of April 25 which brought to an end centuries of differences between the two countries.

Ten Advisers Named for D.C. Study of Taxes

Donovan, Seal, Keech and Allen on Group for $10,000 Inquiry.

A ten-man advisory committee on District taxation was named yesterday by the District Commissioners to assist in the $10,000 study authorized by the last Congress.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen informed Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, who has charge of the investigation, that the following will act in an advisory capacity as suggested by the Senator:

Daniel J. Donovan, auditor and budget officer; Elwood H. Seal, corporation counsel; Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission; Fred D. Allen, tax assessor; Jo V. Morgan, the board of tax appeals; Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank; L. A. Carruthers, president of the Federation of Citizens Association; Mrs. Henry Lee Parkinson, of the Voteless League of Women Voters; John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union, and Charles M. Thomas, president of the Federation of Civic Associations.

The investigation is to be made by an expert who will work under the direction of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, to which the $10,000 was assigned.

The investigator will be named probably this week upon the return to Washington of Senator King, who will supervise the study at the direction of the joint committee, of which he is a member.

While the duties of the advisory committee have not been defined definitely, it is expected that it will indicate no independent tax pro-

96-Degree Heat Equals Record; Causes 2 Deaths, 1 Prostration

Intense heat that equaled the summer's record of 96 indirectly caused the death of two persons and prostrated a third yesterday as Washington's populace sweltered under a sizzling sun.

Thousands of Government employes quit work early in the torrid afternoon. At least 2,500 employes of the Treasury Department were released and practically all WPA workers quit for the day.

Edward R. Thomas, 54, of 1416 W street southeast, collapsed in his home after doing some work on the roof and died before the Fire Rescue Squad arrived. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said death was caused by a heart attack induced by the heat.

Also dead of a heart attack induced by heat was Walter Pinchback, colored, 66, said to be the son of a former Louisiana Governor. Pinchback collapsed in his home at 137 S street northwest, and died within a few minutes.

Jeanie Robinson, colored, 65, 1 Terrace place northeast, was treated for heat exhaustion at Casualty Hospital after collapsing in the sewing room of a WPA project at John Marshall place and C street northwest.

While electric refrigerators and swimming pools did double duty, Weather Bureau officials emerged from a "heated" session over weather maps to issue a forecast of generally fair with slightly lower temperatures.

U. S. Boycott Costs Japan Trade Slump

Commerce Department Figures Show Sharp Import Drop.

Chief Decline Noted in Cheaper Articles of Household Use.

By Robert C. Albright.

Organized boycotts of Japanese goods yesterday appeared sharply reflected in Commerce Department figures showing a pronounced downward trend in Japanese imports for the five months ended in May.

Officially, departmental trade analysts refused to say how much of the decline was due to the present business recession and how large a role was actually played by the boycott.

But a breakdown of items purchased from the island empire showed that cheap food products and electric devices that sell well during a depression period, fell off even more markedly than that symbol of better times, silk.

Trade Shows Decline.

That last winter's college girl bonfires of silk hosiery, labor bans on Japanese purchases and day-to-day unorganized boycotts by American housewives are definitely having their effect was apparent in trade figures for every month of the present year.

For the five months ended in May, dollar value of Japanese imports declined to $47,848,000, compared with $92,386,000 for the first five months of last year. The lowest monthly level was recorded in May, when only $7,020,000 was purchased from Japanese tradesmen, against $18,240,000 in May last year.

The recent trend is in marked contrast with trade data for the early stages of Sino-JJapanese hostilities last year. During the first seven months of 1937 imports of the United States from Japan actually increased by 83 per cent. During the next four months, coincident with first manifestations of a boycott, the increase continued, but was only 1 per cent.

Decline May Increase.

Semi-official explanation was that orders are placed months in advance, and are never immediately reflected in imports. This being true, the sharp decline of the last five months could continue with even more severity on the basis of trade advices from Japan estimating April orders at 80 per cent below the same month last year.

Japan's big money product and its principal export to this country is raw silk. Raw silk imports from Japan declined from 23,664,000 pounds in the first five months of 1937 to 17,022,000 pounds in the first five months of this year, or a drop of from $44,232,000 to $29,065,000 in dollar value. Hughes Roars Over Germany Toward Moscow, Flying Blind With Damaged Landing Gear

Paris Radios Warning of Wheel Broken in Take-Off.

Big Load Slows Plane's Climbing

Making 185-Mile Speed, Airman Reports in Broadcast.

BULLETIN.

New York, July 11 (AP).—Howard Hughes reported by radio at 11:15 (E. S. T.) tonight that he was flying high over ice-forming clouds in Central Erope and indicated he was unconcerned over reports that his landing gear was damaged in taking off from Paris for Moscow.

By the United Press.

Le Bourget Airport, Paris (Tuesday), July 12.—Howard Hughes shot his giant silver monoplane into the air early today, headed for Moscow on the second leg of his around-the-world dash, just a few hours after he landed here on a record-breaking flight from New York.

Hughes and his four flying companions, pausing to snatch a few hours of rest, got away at 1:24 a. m. Paris time (7:24 p. m., Monday, E. S. T.), streaking eastward over the dark valley of the Marne toward Germany.

[A breath-stopping take-off apparently inflicted serious damage to the plane's landing gear, the Associated Press reported.

185 M. P. H. Is Speed.

[As the plane disappeared in the darkness, the dangling wheel giving evidence of something amiss, apprehension arose the Americans might experience difficulty in landing at the Soviet capital some seven hours hence.—Editor's note.]

The commander of Le Bourget Airport said, "We are radioing him to take utmost precautions when landing at Moscow."

The National Broadcasting Co. in New York tonight established contact with Hughes as his huge monoplane was flying over Germany.

Richard Stoddart, Hughes' radio engineer, who was the first to broadcast when contact was made at 9:32 p. m. E. S. T., misread the plane's speed at 120 miles per hour and when Hughes went on the air he corrected it.

"I am sorry for the delay," he said, "but we want to conserve our oxygen supply as much as possible. We are using our oxygen supply very sparingly as the supply is limited and we want to conserve it as much as possible.

"Mr. Stoddart, our radio engineer, gave the first information on this broadcast but it was not correct. He was sitting with his back to the instrument panel and couldn't read the instruments quite accurately. His reading of 120 miles per hour was not correct as we were climbing."

Lindy's Time Halved.

He then gave the correct speed as 185 miles per hour and the attitude as 16,000 feet.

"We have flown blind from the moment we left Le Bourget," Hughes continued. "We were unable to climb at first because of the heavy load we were carrying. And since leaving Paris we have been guided entirely by our instruments."

The broadcast from the plane was picked up in Berlin and relayed to this country by short wave.

British Ignore Request to Quit China War Zone

Expect U.S. to Do Likewise as Tokyo Fears New Panay Incident.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), July 12.—Great Britain today ignored a third request by Japan that she induce her nationals to evacuate the Hankow war zone and remove her ships. The United States was expected to do likewise.

The Japanese, increasingly conciliatory toward foreign powers because of their desire to arrange a truce once the Hankow area is occupied, were worried at the possibility of a new Panay incident.

An American and a British gunboat were directly in the line of their aerial bombing operations below the Chinese provisional capital.

The two war vessels, the U. S. S. Monocacy and H. M. S. Cockchafer, moved back down the Yangtze River and took up stations off the installations of the Standard Oil Co. and the British Asiatic Petroleum Co., about 3 miles below Kiukiang, which the Japanese were shelling with powerful naval rifles.

Acting British Consul C. E. Whitamore said Britons in Hankow and adjacent areas would not be evacuated in compliance with Japan's

By the United Press.

Evian, France, July 11.—The United States tonight compromised its demands the permanent international refugees organization be empowered to help refugees of all nationalities, thus clearing the way for establishment of the organization in London at the end of July.

Great Britain and France maintained the new organization should help only refugees from greater Germany. The three powers finally agreed the intergovernmental committee should settle the question itself when it meets in London late this month.

Immigration Liberality Urged.

The agreement of the three delegations has been embodied in a resolution which will be passed on by the United States, Britain, France and other powers represented at the conference.

1. A recommendation that the permanent intergovernmental committee be established in London, composed of diplomatic representatives of the powers represented at the refugee conference.

2. A recommendation that nations which can admit refugees apply their immigration laws in a liberal manner so that entry may be facilitated.

3. A suggestion that immigration authorities of the participating powers should accept any suitable identification papers from the refugees without requiring a passport from their home countries.

Britain's Plan Recalls 2,000 A Day in Spain

165-Day Recall Scheme Darkens Prospect of Early Peace.

By Joseph Driscoll.

London, July 11.—Hope for an early termination of the 2-year-old Spanish war through the evacuation of foreign volunteers on both sides faded tonight with the publication of the text of the British scheme of evacuation, as adopted by the nonintervention committee. The scheme will require at least three to five months to complete, it is conceded.

Americans and Moors and, in fact, all non-Europeans, are excluded from the scheme for evacuating foreign volunteers. For the purpose of the plan the term "foreign volunteer" is restricted to the nations of the 26 European countries represented on the nonintervention committee. Apparently it is felt Gen. Franco would not release his Moors under any circumstances, and that the number of Americans, Canadians, Mexicans et cetera, fighting on the other side, is not enough to warrant inviting the co-operation of their governments.

[The Spanish government today formally accused Italy and the Spanish insurgents of laying plans to circumvent the non-intervention

Farouk to Permit Egyptian Midas to Wed Zog's Sister

Cairo, July 11 (AP).—King Farouk granted permission today to Prince Abdul Moneim, his second cousin and heir to a $50,000,000 fortune to marry Princess Myzejen, sister of King Zog of Albania.

Abdul Moneim, 39-year-old one-time Crown Prince of Egypt, is the only son of former Khedive Abbas Helmi Pasha II, deposed by the British a ruler in 1914 on the nomination of his uncle, Sultan Hussein Kamel.

Princess Myzejen, fourth of King Zog's six sisters, is 29. She and two sisters, Princesses Rumije and Maxhide, visited the United States last March.

'Go On, Run Us Out of Business,' Ihlder Tells District Builders

Alley Dwelling Authority Director Replies to Critics of Government Competing With Private Industry; Talks at Congress Here.

Private builders here received a challenge to "run us out of business, if you can," yesterday from John Ihlder, executive director of the District Alley Dwelling Authority, which will soon launch an extensive program of low-cost housing and slum clearance.

Speaking to the Washington Building Congress at the Lafayette Hotel, Ihlder's challenge came shortly after the closing remarks of his prepared address, when a member of the congress jumped to his feet demanding an answer to the Government's "entering the building business."

There followed brief remarks by Ihlder, which he stated were "off the record," followed by several more pointed questions to the director. Apparently infuriated, Ihlder exclaimed:

"Why don't you build them (referring to the low-cost housing)? Run us out of business. If you can, go to it."

"Couldn't private business build more cheaply than the Government?" one member asked.

"Yes, you can," Ihlder replied, "but the houses are not up to the standards of the Authority. We build houses which will be a credit to the community 40 years from now. Private industry is only interested in obtaining a profit from their investment.

"Another reason why private industry can build cheaper than we can is the amount of expenses we have. First, there are the legal requirements we must meet. Then, there is the delayed time before we receive official approvals. We pay the standard work rates, too."

A member of the congress, representing himself as a "real estate man," accused Ihlder's agency of selecting the "cream of the crop" for his new houses.

"We then get the poorest element in our apartments," the real estate man stated. "They crowd families into one room, and present worse slums than you are eradicating with your program."

Ihlder denied this, stating that those persons who are unable to afford the $6.25 per room per month rate, will be "aided."

"How about the modern conveniencies which we place in our low-cost housing, can you match that?" Ihlder was queried.

"What is the importance of modern conveniences?" he answered. "These, in comparison to the essentials of good housing, are non-important. Give me privacy, light and air, space around the house and proper sanitation, and you may have all the modern conveniences you want."

Ihlder said the greatest mistake the Federal Government made in connection with housing was giving up this work shortly after the war, during which time the Government entered the housing field.

"If we had remained in the field, as some of our European friends,

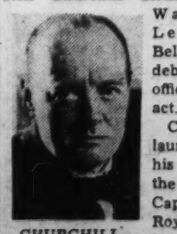
Churchill Scores Hore-Belisha In Commons on 'Secrets' Act

By the Associated Press.

London, July 11.—Despite a gag rule invoked by the House of Commons speaker, rebellious Tory Winston Churchill bitterly attacked War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha today in debate on the official secrets act.



CHURCHILL.

Churchill launched into his attack after the speaker, Capt. E. A. Fitz-Roy, ruled members could not discuss the alleged part the war secretary played in military court action against Duncan Sandys, army officer - member of Parliament and Churchill's son-in-law.

His verbal blast high-lighted debate which was on the report of the house privileges committee holding a military tribunal had violated Common's historic privileges by summoning Sandys to tell where he obtained secret data on Britain's antiaircraft defenses.

Second Biggest Wheat Crop in History Is Seen

967,412,000 Bushels Harvest Predicted as Greatest Since 1915.

A golden wheat harvest of 967,412,000 bushels—the second largest on record—and an above normal corn crop of 2,482,102,000 bushels yesterday were predicted by the Agriculture Department's crop reporting board.

The "all-wheat" outlook smashed records for all previous seasons except 1915, despite a cut of about 45,000,000 bushels in the estimates ter wheat was placed at 715,425,-

The indicated production of winter wheat was placed at $715,425,000 bushels, instead of 760,623,000 predicted June 1. The board reported wheat was threshing out below earlier expectations in the Great Plains area, and in Iowa, Oregon and California.

Loans Are Mandatory.

The bumper 967,412,000-bushel outlook for all types of wheat made mandatory the crop loans to wheat farmers already pledged by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, exceeding last year's output by 89,419,000 bushels, and once again surpassing the 10-year average figure of 752,691,000 bushels.

Details of the crop loan to wheat farmers are expected to be disclosed at the Agriculture Department tomorrow, or Thursday. On a parity price basis of $1.08 cents a bushel, the loans may be anywhere from 59.25 cents to 85 cents a bushels. Officials have indicated they would be nearer the lower level, probably averaging about 60 cents. The department reported farmers averaged 69 cents a bushel for their wheat on June 15. Loans would be made only to farmers co-operating in the AAA program, enabling them to hold their wheat off the market until prices improved.

At the same time the wheat estimates made it mandatory for the department to invoke crop-control provisions of the farm act to restrict planting for next year's crop to probably 55,000,000 acres. The new crop restrictions will be announced before Saturday. Slightly less than 80,000,000 acres were planted for this year's production.

AAA Faces Problem.

AAA officials were faced with the problem of finding some outlet for a carry-over surplus threatening to exceed last year's record figure of 378,000,000 by another 100,000,000 bushels.

H. R. Tolley, AAA farm administrator, said the department is considering every possible means of expanding exports. He said no decision had been made on proposals to subsidize wheat exports.

"We've got to export some wheat, somehow," Tolley commented.

Departmental experts recently indicated world production of wheat may exceed by about 225,000,000 bushels last year's world production. An indicated world wheat supply about 320,000,000 bushels greater than in 1937-38 was not encouraging to export prospects

Decline Explained.

Explaining the decline of 45,000,000 bushels in the winter wheat outlook since June 1, the crop reporting board said dry weather at seeding time in much of the Great Plains area was responsible for slow development last autumn, and heavy rains in April and May of this year "resulted in shallow root growth and heavy top growth."

"The mild, moist spring was generally favorable for fungus and disease growth, though loss from stem rust was confined largely to late field," the department said.

All spring wheat production, including durum, was estimated by the board at 251,987,000 bushels, compared with 188,891,000 bushels in 1937. Durum wheat in 1938 was estimated at 33,376,000 bushels, compared with 27,791,000 bushels in 1937.

Corn Above Average.

The 2,482,102,000 bushel estimate for corn, while 162,893,000 bushels below last year's production of 2,644,995,000, was well above the ten-year average (1927-36) for corn of 2,306,157,000 bushels.

Should this above-normal corn crop again be indicated by next month's crop report, the department will conduct a referendum in the commercial corn belt to determine whether two-thirds of the farmers want to invoke compulsory corn marketing quotas, as provided under the 1938 farm act.

The department said 1938 crops "made a remarkably good start," and bumper yields were indicated all along the line. With the exception of wheat and several fruits, and the possible exception of cotton, sorghums and other late crops not yet estimated, the report said "practically all important crops now show prospects for yields per acre higher than their average prior to recent droughts."

A tobacco crop of 1,496,644,000 pounds was indicated, 3.7 per cent lower than last year, but 12.9 per cent above the ten-year average.

"Supplies of most food crops seem likely to be ample," the report said. "Rice and rye indications are just slightly over production last year. Beans and potatoes are both being grown on reduced acreages. As much of the acreage is planted in June, yields are uncertain, but early plantings look promising."

State Department Quells Rumor Of Monetary Pact With Britain

Misconstruction of Hull Remark Blamed for Report of Contemplated Accord; Venezuela Tariff Treaty Negotiations Opened.

By Sidney Olson.

The State Department last night scotched rumors Secretary of State Cordell Hull had indicated a monetary agreement paralleling the proposed Anglo-American reciprocal trade agreement is contemplated.

Confusion arose over a misconstrued press-conference remark by the Secretary to the effect that greater monetary stability was a natural corollary to the lowered trade barriers which are a consequence of a reciprocal trade agreement.

Some observers took the view Hull had indirectly confirmed reports dating from last April that some revision of the present tripartite monetary agreement is a part of the Administration's vast economic program.

Present Pact Satisfactory.

A majority of Federal financial officials, however, held there is no present pressure from any major source to revise the flexible and until now satisfactory tripartite agreement on stabilization of the currencies of England, France and the United States, that agreement has been on a 24-hour basis ever since its inception, it was pointed out, and even the May 5 devaluation of the French franc by Premier Edouard Daladier did not affect the monetary accord.

This situation, based almost entirely on hot weather speculation, was immediately coupled in some quarters with the impending trip abroad of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., who leaves Friday for London and Paris before vacationing in southern France.

Venezuela Negotiating.

It overshadowed the immediate news from the State Department that formal negotiations are now commencing for a reciprocal trade agreement with Venezuela. Others are under way with Great Britain, Ecuador, Turkey and Canada. Negotiations with Canada, with which this country concluded its first major trade agreement in November, 1935, are intended to broaden its scope and key it into the huge contemplated agreement with Great Britain.

Seventeen trade agreements in all have now been concluded, with Belgium, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, El Salvador, Finland, France, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, The Netherlands, Nicaragua, Sweden and Switzerland.

Reports from New York and dispatches from abroad concerning a possible parallel monetary agreement to the British-American trade agreement had said the dollar would be placed against the pound at a valuation of $4.86 or $4.87. For many months the pound has been somewhat weaker than that point, having dipped below $4.90. Closing figure yesterday was $4.92⅞. The reports began in the belief the pound is weakening.

Changes Held Unlikely.

Officials here, noting the long-continued influx of British gold into this country has slowed to almost nothing, said the British have worked harmoniously with this Government to keep the currencies in close relationship, with the flexible working agreement serving to implement necessary operations in the market.

While not willing to make long-range predictions, the officials said that at least for the present there is no probability of a change in the present monetary accord, as there is no reason of major importance for disturbing the existing parity in the currencies. They cited the French pinning of the franc to the British pound sterling at 179 francs to the pound—third devaluation of the franc since the World War—as an example of how even the most sweeping operations can be carried off successfully in conformity with the theory of international monetary stabilization.

Hull, whose misreported remarks gave rise to considerable speculation during the afternoon, referred all further inquiries to the Treasury. Morgenthau, who yesterday attended the funeral of Supreme Court Justice Benjamin Cardozo, in New York, was expected to return to Washington today to clear his desk for his departure Friday.

Cardozo Buried With No Eulogy, As He Desired

200 Attend Simple Rites for Justice at Home of Judge Lehman.

By the Associated Press.

Port Chester, N. Y., July 11.—In accordance with his wish, Benjamin N. Cardozo, associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, was today buried without eulogy.

The services, conducted in the home of Justice Irving Lehman, of the State Court of Appeals, were brief and simple. There were 200 mourners, among them Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt; Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, and his wife; Gov. and Mrs. Herbert H. Lehman and three of Cardozo's Supreme Court colleagues. Rabbi D. A. Jessurun Cardozo, no relative, read the Twenty-third Psalm, parts of other psalms and excerpts from the Book of Proverbs.

Then he performed the traditional rites of the Spanish-Portuguese Jewish faith.

Single Candle Burns.

Justice Cardozo's coffin was closed and covered with roses, white, pink, yellow and red. A single tall candle burned in the library of Judge Lehman's big house, where Cardozo, 68, died Saturday night.

Weakened by heart disease aggravated by his long and scholarly legal labors, Cardozo three years ago disregarded physicians' advice to quit work.

His associates who attended the funeral were Owen J. Roberts, Stanley Reed and Pierce Butler. Other mourners were Charles Evans Hughes, jr., Felix Frankfurter, of the Harvard Law School; Max D. Steuer, New York attorney; Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Senator Robert F. Wagner, Henry Epstein, State solicitor general, and Justices Edward R. Finch and Irwin Untermeyer, of the State Court of Appeals, and Cardozo's secretary, Joseph Rauh.

Motorcycle policemen escorted the funeral procession to the Cypress Hills Cemetery, Queens, Long Island.

Sheppard for Hutcheson.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, said yesterday he would recommend Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson, jr., of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, for appointment to the Supreme Court in succession to the late Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo.

Hitcheson, a resident of Houston, Tex., previously had been recommended by Sheppard and Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, for promotion to the Supreme Court after the retirement of Justices Van Devanter and Sutherland.

Boston, July 11 (AP).—After a day in which he received an honorary degree from Harvard University and made a museum inspection tour which left Sweden's royal party fatigued, Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf entrained tonight for Washington, where he will be luncheon guest of Secretary of State Cordell Hull tomorrow.

The crown prince, apparently enjoying good health, was awarded doctorate of laws by Harvard. Tomorrow and Wednesday they will be house guests of Robert Woods Bliss, former United States Ambassador to Argentina, and Mrs. Bliss, at the Nation's Capital.

Before departing, the crown prince expressed his and the crown princess' pleasure over their Boston visit, and his great appreciation of the honor conferred on him by Harvard for his activities as an archaeologist and student of sciences and fine arts.

Okla. Primary Tests Roosevelt Backing Today

President-Backed Thomas Runs Against 3 Foes for Renomination.

By the United Press.

Oklahoma City, July 11.—Weary candidates piped their final pleas tonight, and Oklahomans prepared to go to the polls in record numbers tomorrow to decide in the primary the value of a White House blessing.

Echoes of President Roosevelt's speech here Saturday still were rolling across the State, although his chief blessing was delivered with caution.

The campaign was a rough-and-tumble affair and Oklahomans never witnessed one that closed with such fireworks.

The three major senatorial candidates and the five seeking the Democratic gubernatorial nomination each expressed confidence on the eve of the balloting in which an estimated 600,000 persons, including about 65,000 Republicans, were expected to take part. Fair weather was forecast.

Murray Scored.

These points stood out:

1. The visit of President Roosevelt in which he praised—but not too warmly—Senator Elmer Thomas and took a backhanded slap at William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray, New Deal foe, who introduced Alf L. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee here two years ago.

2. The visit of Dr. Francis Townsend, national pension leader, who sailed into United States Representative Gomer Smith, United States Senate candidate and former national vice president of the Townsend movement, in a State-wide radio appeal. Dr. Townsend spoke in behalf of Thomas.

3. The black eye Bill Murray got in a fist fight with a follower of W. S. Key, rival Gubernatorial candidate. Murray is 68 and a former Governor.

4. The entrance of Senator Josh Lee into the campaign in the closing days. He attacked Smith and Murray.

5. The flood of "famous names" candidates which include Mae West, Brigham Young, Joe E. Brown, Daniel Boone, Will Rogers and Wilbur Wright.

Feels Sure of Victory.

Thomas, seeking re-election to the United States Senate for his third consecutive term, said "experience counts in the Senate and I feel sure the voters will return me to Washington."

The President referred to Thomas as "my old friend."

Mr. Roosevelt tempered the indorsement by complimenting a second Senate candidate, Gov. E. W. Marland. He lauded Marland's work in his efforts at oil conservation. Marland said "sentiment for my election is sweeping the State."

Chinese to Seek New Agreement to Sell Silver to U.S.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Chinese government officials will seek a new agreement with the Treasury this week for sale of additional silver to the United States after the present purchasing arrangement expires Friday, it was learned last night.

They plan to confer with Treasury officials within the next day or two regarding a new arrangement, and Administration authorities indicated they are willing to continue buying the Chinese metal.

The new pact will be the fifth between China and this country since May, 1936, under which the Treasury has bought 300,000,000 ounces of the white metal. They were negotiated to allow China an outlet for her silver, an opportunity to buy American gold for monetary purposes, and as part of the Administration program to build up silver stocks to one-third the value of gold holdings.

Norris, at 77, Wonders if U. S, Shouldn't Erase Fascists Now

Nebraska Senator Still, However, Wouldn't Vote to Fight Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

Waupaca, Wis., July 11.—Senator George Norris, of Nebraska, celebrating his seventy-seventh birthday in a work shirt and overalls as he painted a garage addition to his summer home near here, paused today to remark he is looking forward rather than backward.

The veteran legislator asserted he was looking ahead to problems more baffling than any he has seen.

With Mrs. Norris, the Nebraskan spent his birthday just as he does other days on his island retreat.

He stopped his painting long enough to tell an interviewer that horrors of the wars in China and Spain made him wonder if it "wouldn't be better for America and perhaps France, Great Britain and Russia to ally themselves now in a world war to wipe out fascism.

"Although I could never favor voting to ut this country to war again on a foreign field, 20 or 30 years from now when a younger generation of Americans is fighting a world union of Fascist nations, resisting a Fascist wave of aggression against us, those Americans of that day may wish we had defeated fascism in its infancy."

PWA Discloses New Allotments Of $15,000,000

Lower Colorado River Project to Receive $7,000,000 More.

A $7,350,000 increase in the Public Works Administration allotments for the Lower Colorado River Authority project, near Austin, Tex., which will permit increasing its power distribution facilities, and an additional list of 55 allotments for non-Federal projects under the new pump-priming program, were announced yesterday by Administrator Harold L. Ickes.

The non-Federal projects, for which allotments were announced, represented an aggregate of $17,382,075 in estimated total construction costs, of which PWA will furnish $7,776,932 in grants and $55,000 in loans. The list brought the total non-Federal projects approved thus far in the 1938 program to 2,061. The total estimated cost of the non-Federal projects made possible by PWA allotments in the new program amounts to $541,580,036. The allotments for this work amount to $269,594,872, the balance being supplied by applicants.

The allocations for the lower Colorado River Authority project added $4,500,000 to the loan and $2,850,000 to the grant previously made, a total increase of $7,350,000. The original PWA loan of $10,500,000 and $4,500,000 grant was made under the act of 1935.

The original project called for construction of four power plants, two flood storage dams, one of which is being constructed by the Bureau of Reclamation as a separate project, and two nonstorage hydroelectric developments. The supplemental loan and grant was made to provide for completion of the original project, with generating facilities as originally contemplated, and construction of electric transmission lines and substations to serve cities and other public bodies desiring to purchase electricity.

Already 16 towns have indicated willingness to buy power when it is made available by a transmission system, PWA announced, saying power lines can be stretched over 60 Texas counties in the area wherever communities desire to purchase electricity from the completed project.

3-Position Hand Signals Chosen At Safety Meet

Safety Conference Group Passes Proposals for Uniform Code.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A "three position" method of hand signals, designed to provide motorists throughout the country with uniform safeguards for stopping and turning, was adopted last night by the committee on uniform traffic laws and ordinances, National Conference on Street and Highway Safety.

Proposed by Burton W. Marsh, safety and traffic engineering director of the American Automobile Association, the new signal code was adopted unanimously by the 75 traffic experts at opening sessions of their 3-day meeting in the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Marsh's proposal would make uniform hand signals mandatory in all States. It provides the hand and arm be extended horizontally for left turns; upward for right turns and downward for stopping or slowing.

Used in Many States.

This system of signaling, it was pointed out, is now used in less than half of the 48 States. Washington was cited as an example of metropolitan areas which have no set rule governing hand signals.

Meeting for the first time since 1934 to revise and modernize traffic-law standards, the committee also moved to provide States with a law prohibiting vehicles from stopping, standing or parking on "paved or main-traveled portion of all highways outside business and residential districts."

Penalties for infractions of this rule were left up to the individual States. Approximately 60 per cent of all State highway laws are based on findings and recommendations of the conference, according to George R. Wellington, chairman and assistant chief of the safety section, Bureau of Motor Carriers, Interstate Commerce Commission.

Hits "Needless Loss of Life."

Scoring the "needless loss of life" at uncontrolled grade crossings in all sections of the country, the committee adopted a provision requiring motorists to stop "upon an audible whistle" from approaching locomotives."

An additional rule that vehicles should not stop less than 50 feet from the first rail at grade crossings also was voted.

Switching to urban traffic problems, the meeting indorsed in principal a system of "walk" lights for pedestrians similar to those in the District. Under this rule, pedestrians would be granted the right of way at all intersections controlled by these signals.

At today's session, the conference will take up problems of speed and reckless driving.

Among proposals to be considered are ones establishing uniform restrictions in cities and incorporated towns; raising the prima facie speed limit of 45 miles-per-hour (established by law in many States) to 50 miles-per-hour in the open country and to lower speed limits at night.

Adopts Injury Ruling.

At closing hours of last night's session, the committee adopted a regulation requiring persons involved in an injury accident to take immediate steps to secure for the injured competent medical attention, an ambulance or both.

Striking at the drunken driver, Sidney J. Williams, of the National Safety Council, secured adoption of an amendment to present laws making it a violation for an intoxicated person sit in the driver's seat even though the car is not in motion.

Col. A. B. Barber, director of the National Conference on street and highway safety, acted as co-chairman of yesterday's meeting.

Highway safety authorities from all sections of the country are in attendance. Washington was represented yesterday by Inspector William E. Holmes, police traffic supervisor.

Man Goes to Help Auto Victims; Own Baby Dies in Fire

Mifflinburg, Pa., July 11 (U.P.).—As Charles Zeckman dashed to aid victims of a railway crossing crash near here yesterday his 11-month-old daughter was fatally burned in the kitchen where he had left her playing with her eight brothers and sisters.

Ernest M. Boop, a WPA worker, was killed and his two daughters injured critically when their car was struck by a Pennsylvania Railroad train near Zeckman's home.

Zeckman left his children alone in the house while he ran to aid the Boops. The children, playing with matches in the kitchen, ignited some papers. Thelma Iolina was fatally burned when the flames reached her pen after the other children had fled.

The injured Boop girls were taken to the Geisinger Memorial Hospital at Danville, where their mother, Carrie, was awaiting a serious operation.

Probation Frees Key Bridge Brodie

William F. Dudley promised Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday he would never again jump from Key Bridge, even on a bet. In exchange for the promise his sentence was suspended and he was put on probation for a year.

Dudley, who is 34 and lives at 4455 Conduit road northwest, was charged with "swimming from a public bridge" after his spectacular leap from Key Bridge Sunday. Rowed to shore by two friends, he was arrested before he had time to collect a $2 bet from them.

Pay to Be Fixed In Steel Mills Supplying U. S.

McLaughlin Calls Officials of 10 Companies to Meet Murray, Union Head.

By the United Press.

Acting Secretary of Labor McLaughlin, in an apparent Administration move to forestall possible wage cuts in the steel industry, announced last night a public hearing will be held July 25 to fix minimum wage rates for firms supplying the Government with steel.

The announcement came less than a month after major steel companies reportedly were considering pay reductions following a cut in steel prices.

L. Metcalfe Walling, administrator of the public contracts division, asked heads of ten steel companies and Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee to serve as an advisory panel of labor and management to meet informally July 20 to discuss preliminary matters before the hearings.

For Contracts Over $10,000.

Walling said the hearing, held under the provisions of the Walsh-Healey act, would "determine the prevailing minimum wages which must be paid by employers having contracts with the Federal Governmentin excessof $10,000.

This determiniation, Walling said, "must be made on the basis of the prevailing minimum wages of the industry." The remark made it appear that the hearing result may bulwark the steel wage structure. Prevailing wage rates for all major steel producers now are 62½ cents per hour for common labor and it was believed likely the public contracts board likely will recommend a wage rate of about this amount to Secretary of Labor Perkins.

If 62½ cents an hour is fixed as th Government rate, Walling said no steel producer could get Government contracts unless he paid the rate.

In this connection, it was recalled that it was the passage of the Walsh-Healey act which forced the steel compales to go on a 40-hour week. Shortly after it was enacted, it was reported that some steel companies were considering refusing to bid on Government business rather than reduce their work week. They soon complied with the statute, however.

Holland Is Chairman.

Thomas Holland is chairman of the public contracts board. Other members are Oscar Strackbein and Maj. Robert Campbell.

Steel producers asked to attend were President Benjamin Fairless, of U. S. Steel Corporation; President J. Edgar Lewis, of Jones-Laughlin Steel Corporation; President Henry R. Roemer, of Pittsburgh Steel Co.; Vice President Henry Scott, of the Wheeling Steel Corporation; President Eugene Grace, of Bethlehem Steel Co.; Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation; Chairman Tom Girdler, of Republic Steel Corporation and president of the American Iron and Steel Institute; President Frank Purnell, of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co.; President P. D. Bloch, of Inland Steel Co., and President Raoul Desvernine, of Crucible Steel Co. of America.

8 Firemen Hurt Fighting Blaze In Old Ice Plant on 13th Street

Fire

gan at the northwest corner of the plant between the walls of the storehouse and tankroom.

Sergt. Michael J. Fanning, 48, of 3915 Thirteenth street northwest, serving with No. 11 engine, suffered a fractured leg as he lost grip on the rope and fell to the ground. Flames snapped the rope a few seconds later, as Fanning was rushed to Emergency Hospital.

Also seriously injured was Revele D. Jones, 28, 4514 Fifth street northwest, with No. 6 truck, who was overcome by smoke and examined at Emergency for a possible fractured chest. Roy Gregory, 35, 133 Webster street northwest, was admitted to the same hospital with a possible fracture of the left hip.

Thirst probably saved the life of Paul Burthe, of No. 11 engine, who had just descended from the second floor of the engine room for a drink of water when a beam crashed on the spot where he had been standing.

10,000 Watch Blaze.

An estimated 10,000 persons watched the conflagration from the Roosevelt High School lawn and nearby vacant lots. Smoke billowing from the plant could be seen from the upper stories of downtown buildings, and the flames licking over the wooden water tower of the old ice plant were visible for blocks.

No ice had been manufactured in the plant since last fall, and the structure was being razed to make way for a more modern building.

The two storehouses were burned to the ground yesterday and the engine house is probably a total loss, according to Arthur Romhilt, of the American Ice Co. He said damage could not be estimated until today.

The alarm was turned in by Frank Wolfsheimer, 3700 Massachusetts avenue, an engineer employed by the Hechinger Engineering Co., which was in charge of demolition of the plant. Wolfsheimer noticed smoke rising from the west side of the plant. Ten men employed by a firm to which Hechinger had sublet the junking contract were working outside the building at the time and were uninjured.

Within half an hour after the first alarm the bulk of the fire-fighting equipment available in the District was at the scene. Fifteen engine companies, six truck companies, one water tower and a rescue squad answered the alarms, while a dozen police cars and ambulances circulated near the scene.

Acting Fire Chief John Carrington directed operations, while Maj. Ernest Brown, chief of police, and Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and Col. Dan I. Sultan anxiously watched.

Fought for 1½ Hours.

From 15 to 20 lines of hose played on the flames for an hour and a half, and as late as three hours after the first alarm firemen were still standing in the sodden mixture of sawdust, ashes and water spraying the warped and twisted remains of the storehouse. One hose, in use on the roof, was severed by flames.

Three other firemen taken to Emergency Hospital were Walter F. Mitchell, 36, of 2022 Columbia road northwest, treated for lacerations and burns on the legs, hands and face; Volney Burnett, 29, of 1314 Sheridan street northwest, former District golf champion, who suffered burns and lacerations on face, and John R. Barry, 35, 2619 Otis avenue northeast, burns on right hand and face.

Sergt. G. J. Kite, of No. 11 engine, was treated at the scene for burns on the face and hands. Carl Beeck, No. 5 Truck Company, was given first aid at a nearby garage after smoke prostration.

2 Film Workers Held in $50,000 Fraud on Mayer

Los Angeles, July 11 (AP).—A motion picture sound recorder and a make-up artist were jailed last night on charges of forging the name of Louis B. Mayer, head of M-G-M studio, to a series of promissory notes for $50,000.

Arrested were Donald Smart, 35, the sound recorder who John Klein, chief investigator for the district attorney, said was the "brains" of a fantastic forgery scheme, and Layne Britton, 30, the make-up artist, who was exonerated by Smart of any wrongdoing.

Klein said Smart confessed the forgeries, detailing that he represented himself as a confidential agent of Mayer, using the notes to negotiate secret contracts with such film stars as Nelson Eddy, Jeannette MacDonald and Charles Laughton.

Wifeless, Jobless, Man Asks Judge to Let Him 'Try Jail'

A modified version of "The Prisoner's Song" was heard in Police Court yesterday when Herman Dennison, 26, asked Judge Edward M. Curran to send him to jail.

Dennison was arrested for intoxication Sunday at Seventh and E streets northwest by Policeman B. F. Bean, of the First Precinct. "He said he would break a department store window or assault me to make me arrest him," Bean testified yesterday. "so I accommodated."

Dennison told Judge Curran that he recently lost his job and is estranged from his wife. "I'd like to try jail for a while," he explained.

Judge Curran ordered a mental examination before deciding whether to grant the defendant's request.

Army Flier Killed, 2 Injured in Crash

Lieut. Paul R. Gowen was killed yesterday and two other Army men injured when a bombing plane crashed and burned on the beach near Panama City, C. Z., the War Department was informed yesterday.

Radio Private D. H. Bundy and Lieut. Kenneth H. Crosher, navigator, suffered burns, but are expected to recover.

The bomber was on a routine flight when smoke began to pour from its right motor. Unable to gain altitude, Gowen headed the plane toward the beach, where it crashed among trees and burst into flames. Bundy and Crosher struggled from the burning wreckage, but Gowen was trapped. A native of Caldwell, Ohio, Gowen graduated from West Point in 1933. Surviving is his wife, Mrs. Betty Wilson Gowen.

Embassy Employe Swindled of $240 By Trio on Street

Gilbert Brown, colored, 32, employe of the Italian Embassy, was tricked out of $240 yesterday by three colored men and the shopworn handkerchief trick.

Brown was approached by the men at Eighteenth street and Columbia road northwest and asked if he would hold some money for them. They showed him a handkerchief with what appeared to be a roll of bills tied up in it.

Brown told the men he was willing but they refused to surrender the cash until he "showed his good faith" and gave them some money as security.

Several hours after the men left, Brown opened the handkerchief to look at the fortune and found only an empty cigarette package wrapped in brown paper.

'Place in Home,' Just Phooie to Women's Meeting

Special Dispatch to The Post

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 11.—The thesis that "woman's place is in the home" suffered a severe setback at the opening sessions of the National Board of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs today.

The federation will continue to defend married women in business and in the professions, Miss Earline White, of Washington, president, declared in her annual report. Continued professional advancement of women was set as a goal.

"There is no question but that a widespread attack is being made on married women in business," Miss White asserted, "not only by men, but by women. The national federation stands squarely against all discrimination based upon sex and insists that aptitude, training and efficiency shall be the rods by which business and professional women are measured."

Boston, July 11.—Almost in the shadow of the stadium of Harvard College, whose course he completed in three brilliant years, Francis Ormond French, of Newport, R. I., father-in-law of John Jacob Astor 3d, went to work yesterday at a Brighton golf driving range as salesman of clubs and accessories. His pay will be $5 per day and a commission, six days each week, 3 to 11 p. m.

It was another step away from the day last August when he walked out of bankruptcy court in Providence with $1.95, and a step toward publication of the book on which he depends for solvency.

This book, "The Newport Idea," exposes what French called today "the snobbishness of the Newport society," of which he was once a member. Even his own family, he said, was bringing pressure to bear against its publication.

Proud Mother Lets Baby Fall to Death

New York, July 11 (AP).—"Smile, baby—smile at Mrs. Sussman."

Mrs. Sally Glantz proudly held her 7-week-old son out of the fourth-floor window of her apartment so her neighbor, Mrs. Sussman, leaning out of an adjoining window, could see him.

The baby wriggled, slipped from Mrs. Glantz's hands, and fell to the ground. When they reached him, he was dead.

Hines, Dixie Davis Plead Not Guilty

New York, July 11 (AP).—James J. Hines, Tammany district leader, and J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, disbarred attorney for the late Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer, today pleaded innocent to conspiracy charges in the multimillion dollar New York City policy racket.

Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora set August 15 for their trial.

Unionist Is Convicted Of Setting Factory Fire

The Dalles, Oreg., July 11 (AP).—A jury yesterday convicted Al E. Roser, former secretary-treasurer of the Portland Teamsters Union (A. F. L.), on an arson charge in the burning of a Salem box factory during a labor dispute. The court deferred sentence.

The nonunion West Salem box factory, where efforts had been under way several months to organize employes, and an adjoining lumber yard were destroyed by a $130,000 fire last November 20.

H. P. Thomas Buys Justice Black Home

The home of Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black on Quaker lane, near Alexandria, will be occupied after June, 1939, by Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Thomas, of Alexandria, it was learned yesterday.

The lease of the Supreme Court justice on the property will expire then, it was said when purchase of the house by Thomas, an Alexandria attorney, was announced.

Known as Cranford, the house was built about 60 years ago and was afterward bought and remodeled by Mrs. David Blackburn Smith, of Alexandria. It was from Mrs. Smith that the Blacks leased the 11-room dwelling last autumn.

Farm Policies Are Defended By Roosevelt

Roosevelt

a handout from the Federal Treasury."

"They have come to understand, and the rest of the country is learning too, that the agriculture program of this Administration is not a subsidy."

The President stood before the crowd in a hard rain wearing a light-tan Western-style hat. The rain streaked down his seersucker suit. The rain started shortly before Mr. Roosevelt's train reached Amarillo. It came after a day in which he had told rear-platform crowds that "every drop of rain which falls from the heavens" should be properly conserved. Mr. Roosevelt rode to the park in an open car. The pelting rain fell directly on him, and he was protected only by a light coat.

A vociferously applauding crowd stood in front of the President at the tree-dotted park. The rain did not spoil the people's good humor, and most of them took the weather as a joke. In opening his talk, the President said that if he had asked newspapermen what the odds were they would have given him a 100-to-1 that it would not rain at Amarillo.

Until today, the Chief Executive traveled through clear, hot weather.

Unusual Ceremony.

The unusual ceremony of presenting a new judge with his commission on a train platform was performed in Allred's hometown, Wichita Falls. In appointing Allred, Mr. Roosevelt said he was seeking wherever possible to nominate younger men to positions on the Federal bench.

"As I said two weeks ago, the efforts of the people of this country to improve our Federal judicial system have succeeded," Mr. Roosevelt said. "Our principal objectives for the improvement of justice are on the way to be fully attained."

"In line with these purposes," he continued, "I am seeking, wherever it is possible, to nominate younger men to positions on the Federal judiciary."

Speaking beneath a blazing sun, the President said with a smile that he had been accused of "making and breaking" precedents.

"Now I am about to create another precedent," he said, adding his announcement about the appointment.

There were two interpretations of Mr. Roosevelt's remark about creating a precedent. One was that the appointment would be followed by the naming of other younger men to judicial posts. The other interpretation was that the President was starting a precedent by appointing a man from outside a court district as a Federal judge.

Honest Record Praised.

Allred was named judge for the southern Texas district, but he does not live there. The selection surprised some Texas politicians, because Allred had not been recommended by either Tom Connally or Morris Sheppard, the Lone Star State Senators.

Mr. Roosevelt praised Allred's record as attorney general and Governor of Texas "for fearlessness, honesty and good administration."

Allred, now 39, was 35 when first elected Governor. Accepting the nomination, he thanked Mr. Roosevelt "from the bottom of my heart."

Plays for Laughs.

At the small town of Bowie, Tex., Mr. Roosevelt put on a laugh provoking show.

Speaking from the rear platform of his special train, he said he was glad to be at Bowie because it was the home "of two young men—Gov. Allred and Amon Carter."

Carter is publisher of the Fort Worth Star Telegram. He and Gov. Allred were on the platform with the President.

In his brief talk, the President said he wanted to look around for the place where Carter "used to sell sandwiches."

While the crowd laughed two big baskets were handed up to the rear platform.

Hands Him a Dime.

Taking them, Carter presented them to Mr. Roosevelt and said they contained "chicken and bread."

"They are probably better than the ones I used to sell," Carter said. "They're not rabbit."

Then in his punch line, Mr. Roosevelt drew a roar of laughter with the remark: "This would not be complete unless I handed Amon a dime."

The President fished in his pocket, pulled out a dime and handed it to Carter as the special train got under way.

The President, after a Sunday visit to the country home of his son, Elliott, left Fort Worth on his journey westward this morning.

Wears 5-Gallon Hat.

Riding with him across the Panhandle country were Allred, Senator Tom Connally and Congressmen Hatton W. Sumners, Lyndon B. Johnson, Fritz G. Lanham, W. B. McFarlane, Marvin Jones and Maury Maverick.

The President boarded the special with Elliott, who wore a gray 10-gallon hat. Mr. Roosevelt had a similar hat, but it was smaller, possibly 5-gallon size.

A station crowd saw the President off.

From Amarillo the President, on his tour in the interests of "liberal" Democratic candidates, headed for Pueblo, Colo., where he will stop tomorrow morning.

McCarran Foes Active.

Reno, Nev., July 11 (U.P.).—Opponents of Senator McCarran in the September primary in Nevada will seek the favor of President Roosevelt when he visits the State Wednesday on his cross-country tour.

It was learned that three stops—hitherto unscheduled—will be made in Nevada—at Elko, Reno and Sparks.

Within the past week the national Administration has moved against McCarran, a bitter new Deal opponent and President Roosevelt, now engaged in a preprimary tour of States where he has marked candidates whom he wants returned, was expected to speak against him.

Fought Court Plan.

McCarran earnestly fought the President's court reform plan and the Government reorganization bill. Recently William Boyle, a close friend of Postmaster General James A. Farley and of Nevada's senior Senator, Key Pittman, received notice of appointment as U. S. Attorney for Nevada, replacing E. P. Carville, a McCarran appointee four years ago.

Likewise McCarran's desires were overlooked when the President named members of the new Civil Aeronautics Authority, which was created by a measure McCarran sponsored in the Senate.

Pittman Aid Sought.

Democratic leaders of the party faction headed by Pittman tonight wired the Senator to try to have the Chief Executive make a brief talk in Reno Wednesday evening while his train is being serviced at Sparks.

Albert Hilliard and Dr. John E. Worden, McCarran's primary opponents, who pledge unequivocal support of the New Deal, both issued statements tonight welcoming the President to Nevada.

Hilliard, whose father, Judge Benjamin Hilliard, of the Colorado Supreme Court, is engaged in a campaign against Senator Adams in that State, coupled his statement with the charge McCarran is receiving Republican support.

Roosevelt's Amarillo Address

Amarillo, July 11 (AP).—The text of President Roosevelt's address here tonight follows:

Even if Marvin Jones had not kept on telling me about Amarillo once a week for the past five and a half years, I would have known all about it because this is the spot where my wife was presented with the biggest bunch of flowers in the world.

Before I left home Mrs. Roosevelt asked me especially to convey her greetings to Amarillo and to tell you how much she enjoyed every moment of her visit with you.

The biggest bouquet in the world—and here you are greeting me with the biggest band in the world. Back East enterprising communities have thought they were creating world records by assembling bands of 500 instruments, but out here you think nothing of a band with 2,000 pieces in it.

All this shows what you can do in the Panhandle if you put your minds to it and that is why I am very happy that you are putting your minds on the subject of water and land use.

A National Problem.

Everywhere you go in the United States you find the problem of land use, and the same thing is true within any given State. For instance, here in Marvin Jones' district the problem is to get water to the land and to keep the land from blowing away. Down in Austin the problem of my friend, Congressman Lyndon Johnson, is to keep his land from washing away—down the rivers and into the sea. And further down at San Antonio, where my friend, Congressman Maury Maverick, represents a great city and its surrounding territory, the problem of land use is tied up with better housing and the needs of a great municipality.

I wish that more people from the South and the East and the Middle West could visit this plains country. If they did you would hear less talk about Great American Desert, less ridicule of our efforts to conserve water, to restore grazing lands and to plant trees.

In Washington and on the Hudson River I have seen the top soil of the Panhandle and of western Kansas and Nebraska borne by the wind high in the air eastward to the Atlantic Ocean itself. I want that sight to come to an end.

It can be ended only by a united national effort, backed up 100 per cent by you who live in this area.

Money spent for the building of ponds and small lakes, for the damming of rivers, for planting shelterbelts, for other forms of afforestation, for putting plow land back into grass, is money well spent.

Payment to Posterity.

It pays to do it, not only for this generation, but for the children who will succeed to the land a few years hence.

People who are ignorant and people who think only in terms of the moment scoff at our efforts and say "let the next generation take care of itself—if people out in the dry parts of the country cannot live there let them move out and hand the land back to the Indians." That is not my idea or yours. We seek permanently to establish this part of the country as a fine and safe place which a large number of Americans can call home.

Every year that passes we are learning more and more about best use of land, about the conserving of our soil and the improvement of it by getting everything we can out of every drop of water that falls from the heavens. Back in the Alleghanies many of the rivers are called "flash streams"—dry beds or rivulets most of the year—raging torrents sweeping all before them when a cloudburst or heavy rain occurs. And you have flash streams here.

We are fortunate in Washington in having as chairman of the Agriculture Committee of the House of Representatives a man who has a well-rounded knowledge of the agriculture programs in every part of the United States. He and I have discussed many times the great objective of putting agriculture and cattle raising on a safe basis—giving assurances to those who engage in these pursuits that they will not be broke one year and flush the next. We need a great permanency and greater annual security for those who use the soil.

No Desire for Subsidy.

The farming and cattle raising population of the United States has no desire to be paid a subsidy or given a handout from the Federal Treasury. They have come to understand and the rest of the country is learning too, that the agriculture program of this Administration is not a subsidy. It is divided into three principal parts.

The first part represents Government assistance to help the individual farmer use his land for those products for which it is best fitted and to maintain and improve its fertility.

The second objective is, with the approval of those who raise the crops, to prevent overproduction and low prices—and at the same time to provide against any shortages, in other words, to apply common sense business principles to the business of farming and cattle raising. As a part of this second objective we seek to give farmers as high a purchasing power for their labor as those who work in industry and other occupations.

The Third Undertaking.

The third effort of the Government is directed toward a great decrease in farmtenancy and toward the increase of farm ownership by those who till the soil. This includes the encouragement of small farms and of even smaller acreage for those who live near cities and work in cities, and who should by all the rules of common sense grow on a few acres around their homes a substantial part of their own food supply..

You have given me a wonderful reception in Amarillo and I am happy, indeed, to have seen this extraordinarily interesting and progressive part of the United States. I am grateful to you for your co-operation in and understanding of all that we are doing in the national administration to help those who are willing to help themselves.

I shall never forget this visit of mine to Amarillo.

Farish Refuses Payments in Oil For Meixco Land

New York, July 11 (AP).—W. S. Farish, president of Standard Oil of New Jersey, denied today American oil companies whose properties in Mexico were confiscated are discussing a settlement on the basis of reduced values and payment in oil over a period of years.

His statement, issued in reply to such reports from Washington, said, however, the companies have "suggested to the Secretary of State their willingness to discuss with Mexico a new contract" which would:

Leave them in control of their properties; assure Mexican labor a return to previous working conditions, and assure the government fiscal returns as high as those of May, 1937.

"This, in the companies' opinion, is the only basis on which the problem can be worked out to the advantage of all parties concerned," Farish said.

Indiana

strong feeling against Van Nuys among a large number of the delegates. However, they will follow the party leaders and back Van Nuys. The trouble was that the opposition to Van Nuys lacked effective leadership. The fact that the Governor was in Indiana, McNutt in the Philippines and myself in Washington perhaps contributed to our failure to prevent his renomination."

Delegates Grumbling.

Gov. Townsend invited Van Nuys on July 4 to seek the indorsement of the convention, after McNutt's lieutenants and many county chairmen had persuaded the Governor that failure to renominate Van Nuys would heighten the risks of a Democratic defeat at the polls next November. Senator Van Nuys had said he would run as an independent if his party did not indorse him.

Considerable grumbling over the sudden harmony move was heard today, as the 2,200 Democratic delegates gathered here for their district caucuses tonight. One group, strongly pro-Roosevelt, favored adoption of a plank in the State platform which would express not only general approval of the Roosevelt Administration, but also specifically of the court and reorganization bills, both of which Senator Van Nuys opposed.

There was no likelihood that such a plank will be recommended to the convention, however, inasmuch as Senator Van Nuys stipulated that he would not seek the nomination if the platform did not jibe with his legislative record.

McNutt Urged for Senate.

In a last ditch effort to stave off capitulation to Van Nuys, it was learned today, Senator Minton had made an effort to persuade McNutt to seek the Senatorial nomination. Two important factors prevented the effort from making any appreciable headway, it was reported. In the first place, McNutt received the suggestion unenthusiastically, and, secondly, labor leaders let it be known that they preferred Senator Van Nuys to McNutt. The Senator has an excellent legislative record, from a labor point of view, while McNutt, when he was Governor of Indiana, antagonized labor, notably by using the National Guard to break a strike in Terre Haute.

Neither Senator Minton nor any of the other New Deal Democrats believed that nominating Van Nuys would cost the Democratic ticket an appreciable number of progressive votes.

"Dry," Is G. O. P. Nominee.

It was pointed out that even though Senator Van Nuys' record places him in the conservative Democrat class, he was distinctly more acceptable to Progressives than the Republican nominee, Raymond C. Willis. Willis is a dry, and an old school Republican, with a record the Democrats believe vulnerable, notably in the matter of civil liberties and the relationship between his newspaper and the old Insull utilities.

Senator Minton conferred with President Roosevelt in Kentucky the other day and laid the whole story of the "unpurging" of Van Nuys before him. According to the Senator, the President made no comment on the Indiana situation.

request and it was the responsibility of Japanese armed forces to avoid Britons and their property.

United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson said he had not yet received the new Japanese note, the third in a fortnight, but the attitude of the United States probably would be the same as in the past—when Japanese notes have been ignored. The note requests nationals of third powers to evacuate the areas around Sinyang, Hankow, Kiukiang, Kuling, Nanchang, Chuchow, Changsha and Yochow.

Scores of American and British citizens are in the war zone. There are 54 Americans in the summer resort at Kuling, 20 miles south of Kiukiang.

Meantime the Japanese were intensifying their offensive on Hankow and there were indications Chinese resistance was crumbling.

Japanese planes and artillery hurled death on an increasing area on both banks of the Yangtze below Hankow and to the north along the Western Lunghai Railway and in Shansi Province.

Many foreigners in Hankow were in the French concession which was exempted in the Japanese note as a sphere of military operations.

It was learned British Ambassador Sir Archibald Kerr had a conference Sunday with China's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek at Wuchang. The ambassador would not comment on reports British mediation to effect a truce was discussed.

The Chinese war office in Hankow reported 16 Japanese planes yesterday dropped more than 100 bombs on the Western Lung-Hai Railway City of Tungkwan, a Chinese army headquarters. About half the larger buildings in the city were destroyed and there were scores of casualties.

200 Million RFC Notes Believed Sold in One Day

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury indicated last night that an offering of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's notes had been oversubscribed.

The R. F. C. offered ⅞ of 1 per cent interest to borrow $200,000,000 for three years. The notes were placed on sale yesterday morning and the Treasury announced an end to the offer last night.

we would have saved millions of dollars which have been poured into the field today," he said.

The purpose of both Government and private enterprise is to assure an adequate supply of good low-cost and low-rental dwellings, he asserted.

"There are persons, of course, who believe the purpose of housing is to promote industry and give employment," Ihlder declared. "The weakness of this belief is when provision of housing ceases to be profitable or when provision of low-cost, low-rental housing is not as profitable as provision of high-priced housing, then low-cost is not provided."

"So, under private enterprise alone we accumulate slums and hovels and shacks which are a ruinous drain upon the community's resources," Ihlder stated.

"Here in Washington we have one small area that costs the city annually half a million dollars more for essential service than it returns in taxes," he said.

Ihlder summed up his remarks concerning the entrance of the Government in the building with:

"To me the answer is that Government must take over what private enterprise is abandoning. In so doing it will enter a field that has been the exclusive preserve of private enterprise. But what other remedy is there? An answer that consists only of promises is no answer. There must be evidence of action."

The Authority proposes for the immediate future some 12 projects, three of which are slum sites. Other Government agencies have definite plans that will result in wiping out other slums and substituting for them Government buildings or recreational areas, Ihlder said.

"To compensate for this demolition and for some of its own reclamation projects which do not evolve erection of low-rent houses on the sites, the Authority proposes nine outlying projects on land now vacant," he said.

J. R. Skinker, first vice president of the congress, presided over the meeting.

Churchill Hits Hore-Belisha On Secrets Act

almost as a personal matter, to stand between this subordinate court and the censure which is now directed against it," said Churchill.

"Every instinct should have prompted him to spring up and say not merely 'I take the responsibility,' but to say these officers were obeying orders of a higher authority in everything they did."

Churchill, assailed by Capt. Arthur Evans, Conservative, for accusing Hore-Belisha of sheltering himself behind military officers, roared in reply:

"I do not modify in the slightest degree what I have said."

Agrees to Report.

The report of the privileges committee was agreed to without a record vote.

The Select Committee, a House of Commons group, took testimony earlier in private from Attorney General Sir Donald Bradley Somervell, who, Sandys alleged, threatened to use the official secrets act to force him to disclose the source of his antiaircraft information. Prime Minister Chamberlain will appear tomorrow before this committee.

Airline Crash Laid To 'Confused' Pilot

A Bureau of Air Commerce investigating board reported yesterday a pilot's confusion as to his whereabouts caused the crash of the Transcontinental Western airliner in which nine persons died near Wawona, Calif., last March 1.

The pilot temporarily lost his bearings, probably because of a change in the wind direction and a sharp increase in velocity, the board added.

Members of the investigating board were Robert I. Hazen, senior airline inspector, chairman; James E. Read, airline inspector, and Robert D. Hoyt, aeronautical inspector, all of the Bureau of Air Commerce. Robert Kingley, Los Angeles attorney and former associate editor of the Journal of Air Law, served as advisory member.

U. S. Accepts Compromised Refugee Plan would require the other powers to send their ambassadors and ministers, giving the committee the prestige which it would lack if the members had lower rank.

The committee probably will elect the British representative as chairman and choose several vice presidents, including a Frenchman, a representative from the United States and at least one from a Latin-American country.

The most important task, however, will be to choose a director of refugee relief.

Opposition Possible.

The director, who will have a small staff to assist him, will undertake the actual task of refugee relief in accordance with decision by the intergovernmental committee.

Most of the powers represented here appear ready to accept the scheme. Colombia and Norway, who want the League of Nations to direct refugee relief, may provoke some opposition.

Myron C. Taylor, of the United States, permanent chairman of the conference, sought today to heal the rift caused by accusations of South American and other small powers that the "big three"—France, Great Britain and the United States—were "monopolizing" negotiations on the proposed permanent refugee organization.

Taylor explained that unless the United States, Great Britain and France agree nothing could be done.

[Dr. Nahum Goldmann, of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, announced that Jewry was prepared to relinquish claims on all Jewish capital in Greater Germany in return for that country's permission for mass exodus of Jewish refugees, the Associated Press said.

Goldmann added he realized Nazi authorities would be reluctant to accept "such a generous offer."—Editor's note.]

By the Associated Press.

Representative Celler (Democrat), New York, suggested yesterday the United States accept as immigrants this year "at least 75,000 victims of Nazi ferocity."

The entry of the immigrants would be subject to revision of existing immigration quotas by Congress.

The New York Congressman made his suggestion in a cable to James G. MacDonald, chairman of the American committee participating in the intergovernmental refugee discussion at Evian, France, and said he would reintroduce in the next Congress legislation to permit such action.

grams as did the two advisory committees appointed last year by the District heads. These recommendations were subsequently discarded by the House District Committee when it drafted a 1939 revenue bill.

Hazen in his letter to Senator King assured him of the readiness of the commissioners to co-operate in the inquiry through the furnishing of data or records. He also thanked Senator King for his "untiring and valuable services . . . to the citizens of the District."

U. of Md. Hears 5-Ply Program For Education

Dr. Blackwell Outlines Plan for Parent-Teacher Groups.

Dr. J. D. Blackwell, president of the State Teachers College, Salisbury, Md., outlined a five-point program for support of public education, at the summer conference of the Maryland Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations, which opened yesterday at the University of Maryland, College Park.

The five ways in which P.-T. A. associations could develop an increased appreciation of public education, he said, were:

"Develop, through frequent visits to schools, friendly relations between teachers and patrons.

"Study building, curriculum, pupil and teaching staff needs.

"Provide protection to teachers, through not only adequate remuneration while teaching, but for retirement on part pay.

"Interpret schools to the public, through the observation of American Education Week and through forum discussions.

"Co-operate with the legislative chairmen in securing the needed legislation."

100 Delegates Attend.

The more than 100 delegates from all sections of the State were greeted by Mrs. G. R. Clements, president of the Maryland Congress, who presided. Prof. C. S. Richardson, of the public speaking department, welcomed the delegates to the University, in behalf of President H. C. Byrd, who was unable to attend because of other business.

Today's program will feature a round-table discussion of "The Purpose, Structure and Policies of the P.-T. A.," led by Mrs. Charles E. Roe, field secretary of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The conference will continue through Friday.

President of the State Senate Lansdale G. Sasscer, a candidate for Governor of Maryland, will be feted tonight on a moonlight cruise aboard the steamer Potomac to be given under joint auspices of the more than 30 Democratic clubs in Prince Georges County.

Proceeds for Campaign.

Proceeds from the cruise will go toward the Senator's campaign chest, it was announced by Bill Carson, former mayor of Riverdale, Md., who is chairman of the arrangements' committee for the outing. Other members of the committee are John White, a member of the State Legislature, and R. Earle Sheriff, treasurer of the Young Men's Democratic Club.

The boat will leave the Seventh Street Wharves at 8:45 p. m.

Plans to assist the Prince Georges County Republican Club with its annual outing Saturday at Glen Isle, Md., will be discussed tonight at a meeting of the county's Young Republican Club in the Riverdale (Md.) Community Hall. Donald Pitts, of Cottage City, will preside at the meeting.

Meeting to Act On Police Today In Montgomery

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone SHepherd 4200.

The knotty problem of how to increase the Montgomery County police force in spite of the fact that an increase is specifically prohibited by law will be tackled by the board of county commissioners today at their weekly meeting in Rockville.

The board has been besieged with demands for more police protection, particularly in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area where a number of assaults on women and girls have been reported in recent months.

Three weeks ago a militant delegation of clubwomen from that area appeared before the board to demand an augmented police force. The situation was fanned into an even hotter blaze several days ago when the second attempted assault on a woman within two weeks was reported in Bethesda.

Barriers to the possibility of increasing the police force were recited by F. Barnard Welsh, counsel to the board, at its last meeting. First of all, the statute limits the number of men to 31 and that number of men already are on duty. Secondly, the number of constables that can be appointed is limited to three in each of the five commissioner districts, and not only is that number already serving but the board is prohibited from paying them any compensation, the law requiring that they be paid out of fees collected.

Can't Pay Deputies.

A third alternative recently suggested, that of having the sheriff swear in a number of special deputies, likewise faces the same difficulty—deputy sheriffs are ineligible to receive salaries.

Amendment of all of these restrictions is impossible until the Maryland General Assembly meets in January. In the meantime the people are demanding more police and threatening to organize vigilante corps if the force is not enlarged.

One proposal that is expected to be advanced today is that volunteer firemen in the county be deputized as sheriffs until the Legislature permits more regular police officers. It has been pointed out that volunteer firemen are accustomed to fighting fires without pay and may be persuaded to serve in a similar method in a police capacity

Application of the Indian Spring Tavern, Inc., at Four Corners, Md., for a class "D" on-sale beer license was granted yesterday by the county liquor control board after a hearing in Silver Spring.

The hearing was marked by militant opposition from the Four Corners M. E. Church through its minister, the Rev. Paul Croseclose, of Colesville, and a number of members of the parish.

Speakers Voice Protests.

Speaking against the license as residents of the area and opposing it because of the proximity of the tavern to the church and the fact that a traffic hazard already existing would be increased, were the Rev. Croseclose, Mrs. Mary E. Hamilton and Mrs. Gertrude Buscher.

Defenders of the application pointed out that a beer establishment already is located directly across the street. Speaking in favor of the petition, which was filed by Walter H. Dickhaut, Mrs. Anna Dickhaut and Walter Peacock, were Mr. and Mrs. Dickhaut, William F. Carlin and Claude R. Graham.

This is the second application made by the tavern, a similar petition having been denied last fall.

Irving L. McCathran was re-elected Mayor of Washington Grove at the annual election in the Grove Hall. He was the only candidate named for that office at the recent town caucus.

The town voters also elected Robert S. Billhimer and F. L. L. Hiller as members of the town council for three-year terms and approved a town road program, authorizing the council to borrow not to exceed $10,000 to finance the construction.

A special meeting of Cissel-Saxon unit, American Legion Auxiliary, will be held tonight at the home of the president, Mrs. Lauman T. Faulconer, Silver Spring. Delegates and alternates will be elected to the annual State convention next month in Baltimore.

$400 in Tools Stolen.

Theft of tools valued at $400 were reported to the Takoma Park, Md., police yesterday from a shed on Saratoga and Philadelphia avenues, Takoma Park, Md. The shed is owned by the Home Construction Co.

Miss Ruth Shoemaker, a candidate for re-election to the Maryland House of Delegates, will address a meeting of the Takoma Park Women's Democratic Organization Club at 8 tonight in the Fire Hall at Carroll and Denwood avenues. Mrs. Alice Lyddane, president, will preside.

Auto-Rail Firm To Ask P. U. C. For Line to D.C.

Extension into the District of bus service by the Arlington-Fairfax Auto Railroad Co. last night awaited only approval of the Public Utilities Commission after the Interstate Commerce Commission had ruled earlier in the day that the company needed no certificate to operate a terminal here.

Franklin K. Lane, president of the transportation company, hailed the I. C. C. ruling as a "complete victory" for his organization. He pointed out that passengers will be picked up or discharged here only at the terminal, yet to be chosen.

The auto railroad cars are equipped to travel both by rail and on highways. They will travel on their rubber-tired wheels in the District after the P. U. C. has granted them a route.

Plans for bringing the auto-rail cars to a downtown station will be completed within a month, Lane said.

The company now operates a railroad line between Rosslyn, Fairfax and Green Valley, Va. It carries passengers, mail and freight.

In dismissing as unnecessary the application for a certificate, the I. C. C. said:

"It appears that the proposal of the applicant to operate its vehicles over city streets without extending its rails is not an extension of a line of railroad contemplated by the section of the act under which the application was filed, but it is in the nature of an extension of transportation service by bus . . . and the application accordingly must be dismissed."

Precision In The Air.

The second New York-Paris flight stirs the country for quite different reasons from those which put the name of Lindbergh on everyone's ecstatic lips 11 years ago. In 1927 it was the "Lone Eagle's" daring that gripped the imagination; today it is Howard Hughes' very lack of adventuresomeness—the precision of his flight—that arouses applause. His accomplishment illustrates that flying is no longer a matter of "by guess and by God;" it is now a sober business of thorough planning and carefully tuned motors.

The point is admirably illustrated by a young flier's arrival at Roosevelt Field a few hours before Hughes and his associates took off on what appears to have been the first leg of a round-the-world trip. In an outdated commercial craft so small that the gas tanks needed for the trip shut off all forward vision, this reckless fellow had flown in from the West Coast in one hop. Because of the interest in Hughes, he received some small mention in the press; otherwise he might have been completely ignored. The public is disdainful today of foolhardy flying; safety not bravery is now the biggest aviation news.

Hughes suits this picture to a tee. His plane carried three radios in marked contrast with that flown by the ill-fated Miss Earhart whose death in the Pacific is now commonly ascribed to her lack of proper radio facilities. Moreover, Hughes is now known to have planned his present flight for a matter of months if not years before the take-off.

It is news of that sort which recommends him to popular interest. The wealthy (and versatile) sportsman-pilot declares his object in the whole endeavor is to promote world fellowship among aviators. Admirable as this may be, it cannot compare with his service in signaling the fact that flying is emerging from its "romantic" atmosphere of goggles and parachutes, and is fast coming of age.

Traffic Scholarships.

Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill., is offering eight scholarships to police officers interested in traffic control. Evanston is the town where Lieut. Franklin Kreml developed his successful techniques for reducing traffic accidents and discouraging reckless driving.

Not only, then, will recipients of the Northwestern scholarships be able to study the best theories on traffic control at the university's traffic institute, but they will also see in action one of the most effective highway safety departments in the country. Each scholarship provides $1,200, enough to pay the living expenses of the successful applicant through the academic year.

To date no Washington policeman has filed an application for one of the scholarships. This seems particularly strange since Washington has shown a deep interest in Evanston's experiments, even having gone so far as to invite Lieut. Kreml here to explain his work. It may be that District authorities are loath to approve applications from the local force, fearing a protest against the release of even one officer from the city's understaffed police department.

If this is the case, they should be assured that one man trained at Evanston would more than offset the slight reduction in local police protection to be occasioned by his absence for eight months.

Outgo Also Greater.

The report of the Internal Revenue Bureau, covering collections in the fiscal year ended June 30, reveals the interesting and significant fact that during this 12-month period the Federal Government's receipts from all sources were the greatest in history, amounting to a total of $5,658,385,125.

These receipts, in part at least, reflect the rising curve of business activity during the last half of 1936 and the first half of 1937. In view of the recession from which the Nation is only now beginning to emerge it is generally assumed that collections during the present fiscal year will be considerably lower than the record figure for the last 12 months. And since, at the same time, governmental spending has been enormously increased, there is no early prospect of closing the wide gap which has existed for years between governmental income and outgo. Indeed, the director of the budget, Daniel Bell, has estimated that the deficit for 1939 may reach $3,770,000,000.

Under these circumstances very little of an encouraging nature can be found in the bureau's report. When the Government cannot make ends meet even on a $5,600,000,000 income the achievement of a balanced budget seems to be a long way off. If this report proves anything, it is the impossibility of taking the Treasury out of the red without a drastic reduction of Government expenditures.

Justice Cardozo's Successor.

Even the most casual of newspaper readers must have been impressed by one dominant note in the outpouring of tributes to Justice Cardozo. From many different sources high honor was instantly and spontaneously paid to what may be called the scientific quality of his liberalism; to the rare combination of profound scholarship, humane feeling and penetrating insight which made this great jurist literally eminent. Many a commentator, seeking to summarize these qualities in a phrase, said truly that Justice Cardozo was the fit successor of Justice Holmes.

The Supreme Court continues, though the greatest of its justices pass on, and the question now is who can as adequately succeed Cardozo as Cardozo adequately succeeded Holmes. It is not an easy question for President Roosevelt to answer. It was not easy, in 1932, for President Hoover to nominate a member of a different political party for the last Supreme Court vacancy he was destined to fill. But the Cardozo nomination received an acclaim as universal as the sorrow now felt for that justice's untimely death. And the credit which went to Mr. Hoover for this wise choice will go as lastingly to Mr. Roosevelt, if he too rises greatly to a great responsibility.

Fortunately, with the Court in recess, there is no need for haste in the nomination. At best it will be a problem to find the fit successor to Justice Cardozo and in the summer heat of an election year that quest will be more difficult. No single individual, moreover, is today as clearly indicated for the present vacancy as was Cardozo for that opened by the resignation of Justice Holmes. Yet the need for an equally discriminating appointment is today even greater than was the case in 1932.

Primarily this is because of the urgent pressure for progress, and the paradoxical danger that in consequence we shall get no progress but retrogression unless the indispensable connection between great men and competent government is clearly recognized. Indeed the very qualities which make President Roosevelt an ardent reformer also make it the more incumbent upon him to control the reformist urge in the solemn responsibility which is his in the filling of this vacancy. Whatever may be the case concerning a candidate for Congress it is the "Yes, but" man who is needed on the Supreme bench. The need is for the man who, like Justice Cardozo, will affirm every truly progressive movement, but who will always conscientiously ask whether it can be reconciled with the American form of government.

This is true because of the peculiar importance which the courts, and particularly the Supreme Court, inevitably possess in a political system where the citizen is a partner and not a subject of his government. In the United States the courts have power to restrain the government under which they themselves act. And in very few other countries is the legislature as well as the executive controlled in behalf of individual liberty by the checks on their prerogatives which are broadly outlined in our Constitution.

In this light the judiciary is seen as the balance wheel of American government. And, thus visualized, one sees more clearly what is meant by saying that as Cardozo ably succeeded Holmes so must a man of comparable capacity be named to succeed Cardozo. To name an inferior jurist would be to minimize the Court and, thereby injure the American form of government.

The vital importance of the judiciary in the American system has been commented upon by every student of our institutions. And it is interesting to recall, at this juncture, that none has emphasized it more strongly than the last Democrat to hold the Presidency prior to Mr. Roosevelt. To Woodrow Wilson, with his profound understanding of the theory of our government, the nomination of a Supreme Court justice was an almost sacred action.

This is clearly brought out in one of his lectures where Mr. Wilson speaks of the drama in the moment when Andrew Jackson, "the sincere apostle of the principle of action," was sworn into office by John Marshall, "at whose hands the law of the Nation had received alike its majesty and its liberal spirit of ordered progress." President Wilson had admiration for President Jackson. "But," he wrote of Old Hickory: "He was the sort of man who might very easily twist and destroy our whole constitutional system, were the courts robbed of their authority and the great balance-wheel of their power shaken from its gearings."

For all their great responsibility the courts, and above all the Supreme Court, can be no wiser than the judges who compose them. "A series of bad appointments," to quote President Wilson again, "might easily make them inferior to every other branch of the government in their comprehension of constitutional principles, their perception of constitutional values."

That is why the nomination of a successor to Mr. Justice Cardozo is so tremendous a responsibility for President Roosevelt. That is why, in the cool analysis of history, he may eventually receive his final rating more on the basis of that than of any other single act. The President has not always seen the role of the Supreme Court in clear perspective. Precisely for that reason public attention will now more strongly focus on a nomination which will demand as much from the one who grants as from the one who receives the honor.

Reasonable Crop Loans.

Reports that the Department of Agriculture is eager to keep commodity loans at a minimum this year should be considered good news by farmers, despite their inclination to approve price-pegging efforts. The shrinkage of foreign markets for some American farm products in recent years is closely associated with the Government's loan policies. Certainly no further demonstration of this fact should be needed to hold commodity loans in check.

In an address several weeks ago at New Orleans L. H. Bean, economic adviser of the AAA, pointed out that many factors have contributed to the increased output of foreign cotton in recent years. Control of foreign exchange and barter arrangements between other nations helped to reduce this country's share of foreign cotton sales from 44 per cent of the total in 1931 to 30 per cent or less during the last four years. But Mr. Bean frankly admitted that "undoubtedly the 12-cent loan and our holding program were instrumental in creating a price advantage to foreign cotton."

Instead of clearing the way for a new period of prosperity in the cotton belt, the price-pegging policy has helped to perpetuate the very maladjustment which the AAA set out to correct. The cotton surplus is about as large as it was when the crop-curtailment and price-supporting experiments began. The Government itself now holds approximately 7,000,000 bales of cotton. On most of this it has lent 9 cents per pound and on 1934 cotton 12 cents.

Under the farm act the 9-cent loans on last year's crop were extended until July 31, 1939. With this enormous stock of cotton on its hands the Administration is naturally loath to fix loans at a point that would encourage further dumping of this commodity into the Government's lap. But concern should not, and probably does not, end there. The double policy of restricting acreage and pegging prices at relatively high figures has substantially narrowed the markets that American cotton can reach. It is no kindness to American farmers to give them temporary favors which have the effect of cutting off part of their market.

Commodity loans on cotton probably will not be mandatory under the AAA act of 1938 if the existing price level is maintained until August 1. But discretionary loans may be made. In the case of wheat, loans will probably be required, but they can be kept low enough not to interfere with a normal flow of surplus wheat to foreign markets. If the AAA has the courage to carry out that policy with respect to both commodities, the long-range outlook for cotton and wheat should be substantially improved.

Mayonnaise For Breakfast.

The fact that sandwiches were served for breakfast is given as the cause of a minor riot in Virginia's Henrico County Jail. The episode indicates that the law may be much more logical than the reactions of those who run afoul of it.

Well-regulated sandwiches are wholesome and filling. Objection to them for breakfast could not be based on dietary deficiencies. It must be founded on the violation of a modern habit which has become an American convention. Some of the dissenting prisoners were doubtless accustomed to orange juice, cereal with cream, bacon or ham and eggs, with a plentiful supply of coffee. Toast, of course, or (in Virginia) hot biscuits. Any departure from this standard would be abhorrent to those who live by rote.

Yet surely those who have broken the law should be the first to look tolerantly on an infraction of the breakfast code. It looks as though the boys were not good sports. These sandwich rebels may help to confirm suspicions that we are a shade too kind to our criminals. They are not in prison as a reward of virtue.

On the other hand, our information is too meager to permit hasty judgment. If they were real sandwiches there was no excuse for the outbreak. But there is the painful possibility that they were sandwiches of a degraded type against which the most felonious appetite is entitled to rebel. There is uneasy doubt that what were called honest sandwiches may really have been that limp lettuce plus mayonnaise atrocity against which every lunch counter patron must nowadays be perpetually on guard.

The Mormons And Self-Reliance.

From the Buffalo Evening News.

Although Heber J. Grant, the 81-year-old president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, the formal title of the Mormon Church, believes that many of his faith are yielding to the temptation to get easy money from the Government instead of depending on their own efforts, there is little likelihood that the institution's splendid program of helping those who are disposed to help themselves will be curtailed.

Descendants of pioneers, the Mormons have been endeavoring to take their unemployed off relief rolls and WPA lists. They have been settling families on lands, establishing canning factories and sewing rooms and sponsoring other projects to provide needy members an opportunity to make their own living. The program has attracted wide attention and has proved a shining example at a time when many are ready even to lie or cheat to get on the relief rolls.

There is a great need to maintain morale among those who are suffering the hardships of unemployment. Persons without jobs tend to lose their skill and their self-reliance. In the circumstances, many of them look quickly to the Government for assistance, especially to a government that is in the business of dispensing funds liberally with an eye to currying favor and support.

In Palestine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to say that I was much interested in your editorial on Palestine. I have been there twice in the last 12 years and naturally became interested in the situation.

I could not go to Damascus because there was fighting going on between the French and the Syrians. As I gathered from various observations, there was a general feeling that the English mandate in Palestine was working much better than the French mandate in Syria.

My information was that the Arabs outnumbered the Jews in Palestine four or five to one, and that the Arabs resented the fact that their land might be passing from them. There seems no doubt that the present trouble in Palestine comes from the land question.

The word land reminds me of a personal incident which I may be permitted to relate. One day on a train going from Jerusalem to Joppa I happened to be in a compartment with an American engineer in the employment of the British government. During our conversation he suddenly asked me if I had known anything about Henry George or his theory. I told him that I had known Mr. George very well. He said that in America he had regarded the George movement very lightly, but that since he had been in Palestine he had come to the conclusion that this theory might be the solution of the trouble between the Jews and the Arabs.

To show how widespread are the problems of the land question in Palestine, my friend on the train informed me that two-thirds of the Province of Galilee is subject to absentee landlordism. It is not easy to compare areas in the old country and the new. The drive from Haifa through Nazareth across Galilee to Tiberias is about 20 miles. The drive from Afton, Va., across Albemarle County through Charlottesville to Keswick is a little farther. Roughly speaking, I think we may say that the size of Galilee is about two-thirds that of an average county in Virginia or Maryland. J. H. DILLARD.

Congratulates Mr. Surprise.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Being a "Government darling" perhaps it is altogether out of order for me to express any opinion at all in the matter of politics. However, I may be forgiven just once for congratulating Mr. Surprise on his very splendid letter "Reply to a 'Copperhead'" in The Post of July 7. The ideas are fine and very well expressed.

It is most gratifying to find approval of the accomplishments of our hard-working President who, through all the buffetings and storm of his ship of state, still sails courageously and serenely on, smiling himself above pettiness and jealousy, building confidence and security for his people.

I am one who was slain completely by the "good times" of the Republicans. I now have a position and a chance to work and earn my living with the assurance that I shall not be dependent in my old age.

More power to our dear President. After all, he is our President regardless of the party he represents—we elected him. If we were real aristocrats, we would give him the help he needs and the respect due him. May he continue to keep his strength and optimism.

And also more power to Mr. Surprise, who has the courage of his convictions. There are millions who think as he does and who should state their views but most of us just don't bother—we just keep on pegging away at the job which we are so fortunate to have.

Mr. Barefoot Answers A Pacifist

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I commented that our cringing pacifists helped Mussolini to conquer Ethiopia and explained it by the pacifists' emotionalism and inability to think the problem through. A pacifist lady from Chevy Chase has kindly offered herself as an illustration of my case. In reply to the charge that these pacifists were in effect allies of Mussolini she makes three defenses.

First, that France and Britain had made various deals in connection with Ethiopia in earlier years. Now whatever their previous misdeeds, in 1935 France and Britain with the rest of the League of Nations imposed economic sanctions against Italy in the effort to promote the establishment of international relations on the basis of law and justice and not of war. Is the refusal to help the League in this endeavor because of the past history of France and United Kingdom a refusal based on emotion or on logic?

Second, the lady says that embargoes "on any materials except arms and ammunition" would have violated our commercial treaty with Italy. She is misinformed; the treaty with Italy makes no such exception. Italy had similar treaties with many of the countries which imposed sanctions, but it was generally held that the overriding treaty was the Covenant of the League of Nations in which Italy had agreed to the system of sanctions against aggressors. If at that time the lady was urging the denunciation of the treaty with Italy to clear the way for the imposition of sanctions, she has a case; but wasn't she really cringing in isolationist fear, crying "sanctions mean war?"

Third, the lady says it was the pressure of business interests that prevented the imposition of embargoes. This misses the point. Why did these cringing pacifists support the business interests rather than the efforts of 52 nations "to promote the establishment of international relations on the basis of law and justice"—which, she says, is the object of her peace organization?

May I suggest that before the lady rushes into print on Chinese affairs she read T. A. Bisson's "Japan in China." Even one short magazine article might help her a lot, for example, "China Prepares to Resist," in Foreign Affairs, April, 1937.

I do not, as she alleges, advocate war as an instrument of national policy. No war arose from sanctions against Italy, though our pacifists were so cowed by Mussolini's bellicose bluffing that they overlook the fact. No war would be involved in joint sanctions against Japan. Japan cannot attack us now even if the United States alone imposes sanctions. Many exaggerate Japan's current financial and military difficulties, but at her best she is an industrial and financial pigmy beside the United States. Japan is involved in China and uncertain about Russia. The fear of war with Japan (prior to completion of her Asiatic empire) is the delirious emotion of cringing pacifists.

While the bandit powers use war and threats of war as instruments of national policy and the peaceful nations allow themselves to be bluffed, and continually retreat, the future of the world contains no hope. Peace can be established only by the use of economic pressure, only by the courage to meet threat with threat—not that it should take any courage for a combination or league of powers to call the bluffs of countries no stronger than Germany. The establishment of world law and justice without sanctions or threats of force is an idle dream, an emotional vision out of touch with the realities of life.

Swedish Genius.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of July 10 among your letters from readers is one from Milton Rubicam, which opens thus:

"The past two weeks have been much devoted to the tercentenary celebration of the Swedish settlement in the Delaware Valley. In the course of the various addresses rendered on these festive occasions frequent mention has been made of King Gustaf (II) Adolf, Willém Usselinx, Peter Minuit and Gov. Johan Printz—to whose excessive corpulence President Roosevelt made humorous allusion in one of his speeches. But nowhere have I seen a reference to the man (Count Axel Oxenstierna) who, rated as the ablest seventeenth century statesman next to Cardinal Richelieu, of France, was responsible for the actual colonization of the Delaware region by the Swedes and Finns."

If your correspondent will refer to the "Delaware Guide" of the "American Guide" series, a volume compiled by the Federal Writers' Project and published by the Viking Press in time to grace the tercentenary celebrations of Swedish settlement, he will find, on page 22, that Chancellor Oxenstierna was given credit for holding the Swedish government behind the New Sweden scheme during the regency and bringing the New Sweden Company into existence in 1637. Without his influence, there may have been no New Sweden in America.

Mr. Rubicam may rest easy perhaps when we tell him Count Oxenstierna's important part in this phase of American history has gone properly into American record in at least one other recent Delaware work—Bevan Williams' "Delaware, Past and Present" (1929) vol 1, p. 36, et seq.

By the way, President Roosevelt's reference to the weighty Johan Printz might have been weightier had he quoted De Vries, contemporary of Printz, instead of the verifier who made much of "the big tub's 300 pounds. De Vries said that Printz weighed "over 400 pounds." (Ibid, p. 59.)

Shelter For Strays.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of June 28 "H. W. W." complains of untrained dogs which upset his lawns and shrubbery and keep him awake at nights.

In many instances such disturbances are caused by strays—poor derelicts, thirsty, hungry, frightened, victims of human indifference and neglect. If those who complain would devote but a small part of their time and energy to efforts to assist in promoting humane education, so that fewer kittens be left in ash cans, fewer animals forced to scavenge for food, there would be less disturbance. Then, too—in specific instances—if they would help get these animals to a humane shelter—and support their local shelter—there would be less disturbance.

No. 1 Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reference to Mr. Roosevelt's declaration that the No. 1 economic problem of the Nation is the South—sunny or otherwise—I fear that he overlooks the fact that a great portion of the Nation's inhabitants look upon himself as the No. 1 economic and every other problem affecting the Nation.

Pine Tags

We ran into the tree-dotted yard when the big bell rang school out at 3—then a "flyin' header" into the pile of newly dumped brown pine tags. Every year at this time the Negroes raked the big yard around the Headmaster's house—and since time began, as we reckoned it, barrowsful were heaped each year just on our side of the dividing fence.

The level school yard was surfaced with a whitish clay that baked hard in dry weather and was never gooey even after spring showers. Two big pine trees, side by side, marked the end of "pine-tag territory." Three others, about 50 feet down the fence, formed the far boundary.

The ground here was moist and springy, covered several inches deep with a sort of peat, the tag ends from the years. We rolled in the aromatic yielding masses, we fought pine-tag battles and sometimes threw the cones, stealthily, because that was forbidden.

"Comin' Through" was our favorite game—running the gantlet of our shrieking comrades, who pelted us with tags in armfuls. Then we joined the end of the line, and tormented our fellows, until the sun was low behind the trees and we had to go home, with filthy hands and a happy glow.

And "Piggyback," or pine-tag polo. We rode on each other's backs and tried to "unhorse" each other, battle-royal fashion. I never liked "Piggyback"—I was always a horse, because I was considered too big to be carried, and a very poor horse, because my strength hadn't caught up with my height. Our mothers tried to have it banned—because it was hard on our sweaters and anything that offered a clawhold—but nothing was ever done.

So often as a leader rose from our ranks, we would have a club, and a pine-tag clubhouse. Just outside the schoolgate was a thicket, perhaps a block square, of second growth, underbrush and briars. Paths wound through it close to the ground—we made them when we were "robbers" and the "cops" were close behind. Here we gathered twigs. The walls of the house were built of old pine-tags, mostly the peat-like mixture which was the topsoil. We made the walls about 2 feet high and laid the twigs across, then roofed the structure with the new loose tags.

Usual shape of the house was a central room with one exit, leading into a passage which circled round and round it, five or six times. The formal entrance was the dark, uninviting mouth of the passage.

When I was an 8 or 9-year-old initiate, and they blindfolded me, I didn't want to crawl into that tunnel, but I knew I was a sissy if I didn't. I knew they were "laying for me" in there. Finally I started in, and my hips scraped the wall, and I had to crawl on my belly, and I pulled down the blindfold, but still I couldn't see—I heard the shouts and taunts outside and I imagined whispers and weird noises ahead—loose tags fell on my head, and my stomach hurt from the scraping, and the dust made me sneeze, blowing tags off an inch or so of the roof and letting in some not-so-musty air; then I decided it wouldn't be so bad and crawled faster, the walls swaying a little, I put the bandage back on my eyes and finally reached the little room, where they beat me. Then I, too, became a conspirator.

We fought there in the strewn pine tags—not with rancor or desire to hurt, but unorthodox laughter-and-tears wrestling. A fight arose from a misthrown ball, a flung pine cone, a hidden cap. Bodies rolled over and over as each tried for a foothold to loosen the other's grip. We formed a ring and howled encouragement and advice. Soon one grimy contestant would straddle his panting foe and hold down his arms.

"Give up?"

If the victim grudgingly said, "I guess so," he could get up. If he refused, his conqueror kept his seat astride while the ring jeered.

Many a heart was overtried to the point of sobs and anger. The vanquished one, tears streaking his face, would bellow his threats, the louder if taunts persisted. Often the victor, frightened by the storm he had caused, would depart with the spectators, and leave his beaten foe in possession of the field, drying the tears which tomorrow he could not explain.

From such a field I went home one gray fall day. I had fought with a friend, and had much the worst of it. My weeping had at last driven him and the rest away, yet I knew victory was his—and how could I face the crowd the next day?

My mother met me at the door and saw my dirty, ripped clothes and watering eyes.

"Why, Edward!" she exclaimed. "What on earth's the matter?"

"I've only got one friend," I howled, "and I hate him!"

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Imaginary Interviews.

Japan—You have the wrong idea about this war I'm fighting with you.

China—War? I thought you called it an "incident."

Japan—My mistake; I'm glad you corrected me. As I was saying you are making it very difficult by regarding my presence in your country in the wrong light. Will you never understand I am your best friend?

China—You occupy nine of my capitals; you have overrun a dozen provinces and you have captured all but three of my principal ports.

Japan—True, but we have done this with the very best of intentions.

China (shouting so as to be heard above the close firing)—Only the other day you issued a bulletin boasting that you had killed 1,300,000 Chinese in the first year of the war. Naturally, I don't quite understand . . .

Japan (with an injured look)—Can't you get a civilized viewpoint? Can't you be practical like the rest of the world?

China (dodging a few more bombs)—You have been desolating my country, burning my great cities, slaughtering my people and . . .

Japan (exasperated no end)—Must I tell you again that I am acting only in the interest of everlasting peace? My objective is merely to restore your stability.

China—I am bruised and bleeding. I am spent and wounded . . .

Japan—But when I make you suffer I am only freeing you from the menace of communism.

* * * *

China—Never in history have my people been so cruelly abused. Millions are homeless and . . .

Japan—You are mistaken. We are not fighting the Chinese people. Our conflict is only with China's militant leaders who are bent on war.

China (as some bombing planes fly very close to her neck)—This is getting harder and harder to understand. Thousands of square miles of my finest territory have been taken and sacked by your armies . . .

Japan—Yes, but you ought to understand that Japan does not want one inch of Chinese territory.

China (wincing)—It's too deep for the Chinese mind, I am afraid.

Japan—When the war—pardon—when the incident ends the Chinese will have the helping hand of Japan. We do not intend to govern. All we are after is the brotherhood of man . . .

China (as she is knocked groggy by an intensive bombardment at close range)—Stop! You're killing me with kindness!

The Record Reviewed

By Lovell Thompson.

Corpus Delicti Of Democracy.

ONE of the reasons you can't read the Congressional Record is that the Senate generally sits more than half a year, can go on record more than twice as fast as a man can read, and has a hundred years start on most of us.

However, the amazing thing is that you can't even read a good big part of the Record—let alone all of it. Few secret chambers have more privacy than has been given to Congress by the Government typographers. The Record has the look of the last century in its style, and in the attempt to make it cheap enough for all to buy, it has been made difficult for most to read.

He who travels in the Record is soon exhausted by the endless gray desert. His throat is parched by the dust of woodpulp. His rescuer will find him misled by mirages and fallen by the shore of an old dream.

Yet the Record is not dull. It is America's longest story and greatest collection of character sketches. It is a network of real issues; the most human of human documents. It is the corpus delicti of democracy. It is a slow-motion picture of progress, in which progress is growth; growth is age, and age is death. It can be intensely exciting. Under favorable circumstances, it can even be read.

* * * *

PERSONALITIES take shape and almost shake your hand. Homely words and autobiographic phrases build clear pictures of those who talk the most. "I have watched these grain markets," says Senator Frazier, "because all my life I have lived on a farm and raised wheat." Senator Hale—the voice of Maine—says that he will not offer the amendment he had "contemplated to offer." Childhood errors hold out in the midst of finished periods. Senator Harrison says, "Equally as well," and that seems to tell us something about the color of his overcoat and backs up his outlook on cotton taxes.

Of course, the most impressive thing about the Record is its length. On April 8 (the day the House voted down the reorganization bill), the Record runs to about 150,000 words. At that gait, and it's not an unusual speed for them, this club of Rip Van Winkles talks at the rate of about two "Gone-with-the-Winds" a week—one for the Senate and one for the House.

The talk in the two houses of Congress is remarkably good. At the county cross-roads round the checkerboard, the speech is full of quick sense and hard countryman's wit. Such talk as this is the wild stock of senatorial debate. The discussion in the Senate suffers from the weaknesses of domestication. It is more showy and less aromatic than its wild brother. Yet it has quality none the less.

* * * *

TO THINK OF 500,000 men engaged on a seven-month debating marathon, and quality debate at that, is to find the flaw in Congress. It must be first and foremost a bunch of virtuosos, a rink full of fancy skaters, cutting pigeon's wings.

The circle of seers are trained to talk, so talking is the end, and action need not follow. Things remain matters of theory to Congress long after they are fact to the rest of the world. That is what gives to Congress its Rip Van Winkle quality.

County cross-road or national four-corners, the talk is mostly shop. The speakers feel at home. The discussion is not empty but energetic, full of the effort to convey ideas and win onlookers. The reality and intimacy of the Record are what leap out. He who reads it sits in democracy's kitchen and listens to her servants discuss her.

Observer Cites Britain's Determination To Grow Wheat And Sugar As Index Of Cost Of War Psychosis.

Paris.

IT IS EXTREMELY DIFFICULT to obtain reliable information on what it is really costing the peoples of Europe to prepare for the war that they are preparing themselves to fight. But now and then there is an incident which makes clearer than statistics could make it, what it means to live in a world that is dominated by the need to prepare for war. Such an incident has just occurred in England.

LIPPMANN.

Some time ago a corps of experts, known as the "Committee Against Malnutrition," was told to study the problem of providing the British people with enough of the right kind of food. They found that a considerable number of the people of England were poorly fed, and that what they lacked in their diet was enough dairy produce, eggs, fresh fruit and vegetables. The committee found at the same time that the government was spending much money on subsidies to increase the production of wheat and sugar in the British Isles.

Now in a rational world the sensible thing for England to do would be to buy more wheat and sugar abroad, and to use the money, the land, the capital, and the labor saved at home to produce dairy products, eggs, fruit and vegetables. Wheat and sugar can be grown better elsewhere than in England. They can be carried in ships halfway around the world. But dairy products and the rest are perishable. They need to be produced near the big cities if they are not to be too expensive to be within the reach of the poor. So if Britain were able to do the rational thing, it would import more wheat and sugar and grow more dairy products at home.

British Dare Not Try Rational Remedy.

BUT BRITAIN dare not do the rational thing to feed her people properly. She must prepare for an attack on her shipping by submarine and airplane. She must prepare therefore to feed herself somehow, badly to be sure but enough to keep the people alive. Wheat and sugar are bulky commodities. They require many ships. And since Britain must face the fact that many ships will be sunk and that there will not be enough ships, she must grow wheat and sugar at home, and let the British poor do without dairy products, eggs, fruits, and fresh vegetables.

Though Britain could afford to feed her people adequately in time of peace, she dare not do it because to do that would make her vulnerable in time of war. So on grounds of military strategy alone, the British are compelled to keep a part of their population undernourished.

If such a thing as this must happein in Great Britain, where life is relatively normal, we need have no doubt that it is typical of the action of governments all over the continent. It is said, for example, that in Poland, which is in a desperately difficult economic position, the government deliberately refuses to drain the swamps on the Russian border and deliberately refrains from improving the roads on the German border. Though Polish peasants need land and roads, they do not get them because it is necessary to make the frontiers impassable to Russian or German tanks, artillery and lorries. It is an indubitable fact that Italy has been debasing her bread because the crop of wheat is short, instead of buying wheat abroad with the foreign exchange that goes to buy raw material for armaments.

War's Real Expense Seen In Preparations.

IN FACT it may be said, I think, that the real cost of preparing for war is not the actual money spent on weapons of war. Those costs would still be tolerable if they could be paid for out of a tax on an otherwise normal and rational economic system. The real cost of armaments is the necessity of putting the whole economic system on a war footing, of acting now in time of peace as if the nations were already besieged and at war. The British have to grow wheat and sugar in the British Isles, though it is very expensive, though they must undernourish part of their people, because they must live now as if submarines and airplanes were attacking their ships.

The effect of living in a war economy in time of peace is to impoverish the people and the governments, and thus to aggravate the domestic social problem everywhere and to inflame the international tension at all the points of conflict. The preparation for war makes it increasingly difficult for all the governments to solve their own social problems at home. Therefore, it becomes increasingly difficult for them to make the concessions and arrangements abroad which might appease the accumulating tension.

We are witnessing what is in effect a prolonged and total mobilization of all the people of Europe, and the time has come or, at least, it is close at hand when every human interest will be governed by the necessities of the mobilization. The point now where the ultimate decisions of statesmen, in all important economic and social and financial affairs, are subject to the judgments of the military commanders.

Arab Revolt

By Barnet Nover

The Latest Flare-Up In Palestine.

FROM TIME to time, since Great Britain assumed the mandate over Palestine, that historic land has been swept by the flames of rebellion.

There was, to cite but the outstanding instances, the outbreak of Arab nationalist violence in 1921-22. There was the Wailing Wall incident of 1929 and its bloody aftermath. There was the general strike of the more recent past. And now Palestine is again being subjected to a reign of lawlessness and terrorism.

At first these outbreaks were largely sporadic, incidental, isolated. Although reflecting, in general, the resentment felt by Arab nationalists against the attempt to carry out the promise of the Balfour declaration of 1917 to establish in Palestine a national home for the Jews, they did not appear to be organized. And they appeared to be lacking in calculation.

That cannot be said any longer. Now, as before, the acts of violence are the acts of individual fanatics. But there is now in the terrorist movement as a whole a more calculated, more deliberate quality than was present heretofore. In other words terror in Palestine has become an instrument of policy timed to achieve some concrete end.

* * * *

THE QUESTION, therefore, arises: why did the present flare-up arise when it did?

There is, of course, the whole tangled background of the Palestinian problem to be considered—the conflicting promises given by Great Britain during the World War to Jews and Arabs; the rise of independent Arab states on the borders of the Holy Land and of an Arab national movement within it; the remarkable success of the Zionists in making the rocky hillsides and pestilential valleys of a neglected land bloom like a rose; the wobbliness of British policy and so on.

But that does not tell the whole story of the present unhappy situation in Palestine. There are, in addition, certain extra-Palestinian factors which must be taken into account.

* * * *

THE FIRST of these is the partition plan originally adumbrated in the Peel Commission's report of a year ago. In accepting this plan Great Britain openly and definitely admitted that it had failed to make a go of the mandate, that to solve the problem of Arab-Jewish relations Draconian measures were necessary. It was proposed that Palestine be divided into a tiny Jewish state, an Arab state united with Transjordan and the continuance of the present mandate in a central zone including Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Nazareth, Tiberias and the Port of Haifa.

This plan won the wholehearted approval neither of the Arabs nor of the Jews. And the effect of this announcement thus far has been only to intensify tensions in the Holy Land. For it reflected the fact that Great Britain was preparing so far as possible to divest herself of responsibilities, clinging only to the minimum compatible with her imperial interests. Nor was that all. Previous and subsequent developments not only in the Near East but elsewhere in the world indicated that violence or the threat of violence could win valuable concessions from Great Britain.

It was the Italian threat from the direction of Libya, for instance, that had led Great Britain finally to implement Egyptian independence in a treaty with that country. Italy and Germany intervened in Spain, a land extremely vital to British interests and one where for centuries Great Britain had opposed all attempts at foreign domination. Yet Great Britain, far from opposing such intervention with all the force at her command, resorted instead to the defeatist device of a nonintervention agreement. Latterly, to get Italy out of Spain, Great Britain signed an agreement with the Rome government in which she pledged herself to recognize Italy's ownership of Ethiopia.

Nearer to Palestine, there was the circumstance that when Turkey began to kick up a row over Alexandretta, Great Britain's partner, France, hastened to make an agreement with the Ankara government practically conceding the sanjak to the Turks. And Great Britain herself extended a large loan to Turkey. And for 12 months the partition plan itself has laid on the shelf.

* * * *

THE ARAB Nationalist leaders know, however, that there is a limit to such a policy of retreat in the face of bluff and bluster as the British government has been pursuing. Sooner or later, they realize, it will come to an end. Indeed, such developments as the treaty with Egypt and the rapprochement with Turkey might free Great Britain's hands.

In the meantime at Evian, Great Britain is playing a principal role at the conference called by President Roosevelt to do something for the Jewish and other refugees from Germany and Austria.

Palestine happens to be the one place which, if Great Britain permitted, a very large number of the Jewish refugees could go. The pressure on the London government to increase the very limited number of immigration visas to Palestine may therefore increase. Putting two and two together, the Arab leaders probably decided to act now, while Great Britain was still in a compromise mood and while the Evian conference was still in the formative stage. So fuel was cast on the ever-smoldering flames in the Holy Land, and a new period of bloodshed was begun.

Writer's Correspondence Reveals Fewer Panaceas And More Satiric Jabs At Policies Of New Deal Administration.

Avondale, Chester County, Pa.

WHEN I COME to the farm I usually bring with me an accumulation of mail—pamphlets, books, letters—which come to me in Washington, but which I cannot read in the city as thoughtfully as up here. When the depression was at its depth, many of my letters contained "white rabbits," novel and ingenious suggestions for bringing recovery. Many persons were quite certain that if the Government would take the steps they proposed, the depression would end at once.

SULLIVAN

Recently, many letters contain fables or parables about the New Deal, usually critical of it. The present letters, like the ones during the depression, reflect belief that there is a better way, and confidence on the part of the writers that they know the better way. In my collection on this trip is a letter in the form of a fable. The fable has no literary quality, does not quite attain the satire that is intended. Still, it stimulates more thinking than is comforable on a hot day:

"Once upon a time there was a farmer who sold two chickens to a city shopkeeper. With the proceeds he bought from the shopkeeper two shirts.

"So the farmer had two shirts and the city man had two chickens.

"Then came the New Deal, and told the farmer he should get more money for his chickens by making them scarcer—he must not raise so many.

"The New Deal also told the working man in the city that he must work fewer hours and get more money for making fewer shirts. That, of course, caused shirts to cost more.

"Then the farmer brought one chicken to market. He got as much money for it as he previously had got for two chickens. He felt fine.

"However, the farmer went to buy some shirts, but found that shirts were also doubled in price. So he got one shirt.

"Now the farmer has one shirt and the city man one chicken—whereas without the New Deal the farmer could have had two shirts and the city man could have had two chickens.

"This, boys and girls, is called 'The More Abundant Life'."

Cotton Reductions Set Up Vicious Circle.

IN THE same field as that fable is another provoker of thought which describes a "vicious circle:"

"Secretary of Agriculture Wallace reduces the acreage of cotton. He decrees that each cotton raiser shall plant only so many acres; he puts a quota on each farm.

"That means, of course, less cotton planted. Less cotton planted means fewer men engaged in working in the cotton fields, fewer men engaged in transporting cotton to the gin, fewer men at work on the railroads carrying cotton, fewer employes in cotton mills. It means, in short, fewer men at work.

"So, we have fewer men at work. And fewer men at work means fewer men able to buy cotton shirts and other cotton goods. That in turn means less demand for cotton, and that, finally means less cotton to be raised—Mr. Wallace next year will have to reduce the acreage of cotton still further."

Another person is puzzled about another aspect of New Deal economics. This has to do with Secretary Wallace's recent purchase of $10,000,000 worth of men's clothing.

Manufacturers of men's clothing have on hand a quantity of ready-made suits they can't sell. Why can't they sell them? The answer would seem obvious. It is because men at work have not enough money to buy them.

So, what happens? Secretary Wallace buys $10,000,000 worth of those suit, with Government money. Mr. Wallace, having bought the suits, gives them away. He gives them to persons who are at work, persons on relief. The net result seems to be: men at work are not great enough in number to buy suits, or cannot afford to buy them; men not at work get the suits for nothing.

Vote-Buying Scored In Another Communication.

STILL ANOTHER communication deals with yet another situation. I paraphrase it. This one is in the field of ethics. It has to do with vote-buying. Consider first a simple transaction, in which two men participate. Call the two men Jones and Brown. Both, needless to say, are fictitious persons. Jones is a candidate for office; Brown is a voter.

Jones goes to see Brown. Jones addresses Brown thus: "I am a candidate for office. I would like to have your vote. If you will vote for me I'll give you $5."

Brown replies, "Okay." Brown votes for Jones and Jones pays him $5. The transaction is completed.

Now, consider another form of persuading voters, again in terms of a typical transaction. Candidate Jones calls on voter Brown. Jones addresses Brown thus: "I'd like to have your vote. If you vote for me, I'll make it worth your while. I am a trustee of some money belonging to the taxpayers. If you vote for me, I'll see that you are taken care of." Brown votes for Jones and Jones sees that Brown is taken care of with the taxpayers' money.

As between those two transactions, which is the less moral? The person who presents this problem thinks that direct purchase is the less immoral. That is a simple transaction between two men. Brown delvers his vote. Jones gives him $5 out of Jones' own pocket. It is simple purchase and payment.

By the other way of doing it, Jones doesn't pay the money out of his own pocket—he pays it out of the taxpayers' pocket, out of the fund of which he is trustee.

How does the law look at it? Under the law, the candidate who pays his own money, if caught, goes to jail. The candidate who pays out of trust funds belonging to the taxpayers suffers no penalty.

But perhaps there are good answers to all these puzzles. Maybe they would not baffle me so much if the weather were less hot.

The Federal Diary

"It is to the best interest of all employes that the three department unions work together on projects of mutual benefit"—the statement appears to be obvious, but it sometimes seems to contain a little dynamite.

This particular plea for a united front comes from Department of Agriculture Local No. 2, U. F. W. A., in the July bulletin. It is logically based on the claim that all three unions in Agriculture (A. F. G. E., N. F. F. E., U. F. W. A.) are composed of white-collar workers; all are vertical, admitting department employes regardless of occupation or race; all want formal grievance procedure; all want civil service and classification extended; all want pay and working conditions liberalized.

Translating belief in action, the three Agriculture locals have established a joint committee "with which to effect mutual aims." Simple, isn't it?

Recent additions to the Washington staff of the Farm Credit Administration include representatives of North, South, East and West.

Dr. Kenneth H. Hunter, of Fayetteville, Ark., who has held positions in the Bureau of the Census, Bureau of Labor Statistics and Federal Trade Commission, has entered FCA's co-operative division.

To the Federal Credit Union Section have come E. Edward Stephens, of Berkeley, Calif., and Alfred Jonas, jr., of New York City. Joseph F. Hamm, of Scranton, Pa.; Aletha H. Devitt, of Bismarck, N. Dak., and Clyde L. Wheat, of Coker, Ala., have been appointed to various sections of the Administrative Division.

An alluring account of a Potomac cruise that will be gliding through the moonlight this week-end under sponsorship of the Young Democratic Clubs of the District includes the following choice paragraph:

"There is also a cruise chaperon. She is Mrs. May Thompson Evans, assistant director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee. She was chosen by the Young Democrats because her looks and her manner make her the sort of chaperon fraternities dream of, and because she'll see that everybody meets everybody else, and you'll have a perfectly logical explanation to make to your mother . . ."

Chairman is P. H. Colman, Agriculture, assisted by Harold Blanton, PWA; William J. McGuire, Agriculture; Francis Wagner, WPA; Clyde Merriman, Agriculture, and Royce Givens, secretary to Representative Bland, of Virginia. Miss Evelyn Adams, Interior, is women's chairman, assisted by Miss Nellie Polley, Bituminous Coal Commission, and Miss Mary Redman, Justice.

Federal employes on a five-day week who feel that Saturdays off (within a leave period) shouldn't be subtracted from their annual leave will have to wait a while longer before their grievance is adjusted. U. F. W. A. President Jacob Baker, who had asked Mr. Roosevelt to do something about the matter, has received word that, according to a ruling of the Attorney General, the President has no power in this case.

Planning to attack the question through Congress next fall, the U. F. W. A. wants to hear from employes affected. A lot of 'em are in the G. P. O., some are in the Baltimore S. S. B. and there are plenty others.

Godfrey V. Wickware, executive assistant to the president of A. F. G. E., spoke at the establishment last week of a new interdepartmental lodge of the union in Richmond. We suppose it was in allusion to the N. F. F. E. members in Richmond that Wickware said the A. F. G. E. was not attempting to "wean away" Federal employes from any other group.

U.S. Court Upholds FilmBlockBooking

Los Angeles, July 11 (AP).—Legality of "block booking," by which motion picture firms cmopel exhibitors to contract for an entire year's output, was upheld today by U. S. District Judge Leon R. Yankwich.

Judge Yankwich sustained a demurrer by Paramount Pictures, Inc., to a complaint filed by Oxnard Theaters, Inc., and 19 other exhibitors, asking a total of approximately $100,000 assertedly lost because of "block booking."

Judge Yankwich declared, "If 'block booking' is to be eliminated from the industry, it will have to be accomplished through national legislation rather than court action."

Judge Sets Aug. 8 For Pennsylvania Political Inquiry

Harrisburg, Pa., July 11 (AP).—Judge Paul N. Schaefer today ordered the Dauphin County grand jury to start an investigation August 8 of charges of political graft against Gov. George H. Earle and 13 of his associates.

"There is reasonable cause," Judge Schaeffer said, "to believe that an investigation of the charges made will disclose some criminal misconduct affecting the public business."

The order came after Judge Schaeffer studied evidence collected in the last three months by District Attorney Carl B. Shelley, who demanded the investigation.

The charges were made during the bitterly contested Pennsylvania primary election campaign in May. They included allegations of "sold" legislation and political coercion.

N. Y. Home Relief Costs Drop $800,000 in May

Albany, N. Y., July 11 (AP).—Home relief costs in New York State dropped $800,000 during May, David C. Adie, State welfare commissioner, announced today.

Pointing to a decrease of 7 per cent in costs, the commissioner said relief cases fell off 7.9 per cent in his monthly report that home upstate and 3.2 per cent in New York City from the April totals.

The State-wide drop, the report added, was 5 per cent, or from 350,598 to 314,149.

"Mah-goodness!!"

Fairway Talking

By Bernard Darwin.

Reticence For Golfers.

THE GOLFER admittedly is a hypersensitive creature, and many things goad him to fury which would seem harmless to the outer and uninitiated world. I am not thinking so much of the offenses which are particularly mentioned in the etiquette of golf—the talking or moving on the stroke, the standing, as it is called, "behind the player's eye," and so on. Of these we have all been at times guilty through sheer inadvertence. I am thinking rather of the things that we say to our opponent, and which would so much better have been left unsaid.

I was once playing with a great and wise golfer, now dead, when I apologized to him for some childish outcry over my ill fortune. He himself had suffered in his youth from a fiery temper and was very kind and sympathetic. He said that he had found it a good rule to try to make no comment either on his own shots or on his adversary's.

It is an admirable rule, and, though I have wholly failed to follow it, I have never forgotten. Of course it has exceptions, and an occasional "Hard luck!" is surely not only permissible but laudable; but it should be reserved for a calamity.

Too much butter, like too much sympathy, is to be deprecated, but occasional praise of the opponent's shots is only decent. Yet we must beware of asking him in humble admiration how he does it, for if once he begins to think on that subject he may be able to do it no more.

Spare The Babies

Will you please use your influence so that whenever demonstration air raids are given the particulars inviting the public to attend should warn mothers not to bring very young children?

We have just had in Leeds two grim and, I am sure, necessary demonstrations of how we might be attacked by airplanes and what precautions are needed to ward them off. Some mothers took their babies, and it was pitiful, when the guns went off with a crash beyond all exception to hear the babies shriek in terror and refuse to be comforted.

It is to be feared that such an experience for a small child may cause irreparable harm to the nervous system.

Weirton Counsel Is Barred From Labor Hearing

Steubenville, Ohio, July 11 (AP).—Examiner Edward G. Smith of the National Labor Relations Board today ordered Attorney Clyde A. Armstrong, counsel for the Weirton Steel Co., excluded from the board's hearing of charges of unfair labor practices against the company.

The examiner charged Armstrong had been guilty of "defiant, contentious and contumacious behaviour."

He declined to hear an answer from Armstrong, who has been the company's chief counsel in the long hearing—now in its eleventh month. Smith adjourned the hearing until Wednesday.

Plainfield, N. J, July 11 (AP).—John I. Harvey, tutor, was on his way to Japan today for what he announced was a chance to talk Premier Konoye into sending his son, Prince Fumitaka "Butch" Konoye, back to Princeton next year.

Fumitaka, scheduled to graduate from Princeton last month, flunked, and later said it was possible his father would not allow him to return in September.

Harvey, a teacher at Hun School and tutor for Princeton students, left his home in Plainfield last night to join young Konoye on the West Coast where they plan to leave for Japan on July 18.

Iron In Diet Insures Pep and Charm

Without It One Becomes Listless and Cranky.

By Ida Jean Kain.

SINCE THE average American diet is dangerously low in iron, it follows that on the average we do not have as much color or pep or as good dispositions as we should have

This mineral is listed among the food elements that are necessary if we are to keep fit . . . you might almost say, fit to live with! There are less than three grams of iron in the entire body, just about enough for five carpet tacks or a couple of nails. The body uses an infinitesimal amount of this precious mineral daily, but that amount must be replaced as it is used. Otherwise, we become pale, listless and cranky.

An iron-rich diet is necessary to health.

The richness of the normal red coloring matter of the blood depends on iron, and it is iron that puts roses in your cheeks. The red corpuscles carry the oxygen to the tissues and carry away the wastes, and the power to do this is determined by iron, the mineral constituent of hemoglobin. It is not surprising that health and disposition are affected by a diet lacking in iron.

Ordinarily, the iron should come from food, and when it is needed in medicinal form is a problem for your doctor. As a rule, if you have enough iron in your food, you will not need it in any other form.

The needs of the average person can be supplied daily in two servings of the iron-rich foods, so there is little excuse for failure to get your share. At breakfast you have a wide choice of whole grain breads and cereals, tomato juice, stewed prunes, apricots, raisins and eggs. It is very easy to include one of these foods in the breakfast menu.

There is an even longer list of iron-rich foods for the other two meals. Among the vegetables are greens of all kinds, turnips, beet tops, chard, mustard, dandelion greens, water cress, and, of course, spinach. Meats are a good source of supply, and those richest in iron are liver, kidneys, brains and the heart.

There are even iron-rich desserts, made with eggs or fruits. On this list are custards, puddings and dishes made with raisins, prunes or apricots, and such fresh fruits as blackberries, raspberries and quinces.

You are assured of one-fourth your day's supply of iron by taking one-half cup of greens, another fourth by taking one-third pound of meat. You get one-tenth of the day's supply in an egg. Together with the whole grains, vegetables and fruits of a balanced diet, these foods provide the entire amount needed for the day to replace what your body has used. Do not leave these important foods out of your menu.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Having Won Proposal of Marriage, Girl Is Uncertain of Love for Man; Asks Help in Deciding.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 23 years old. Last summer I met a boy with whom I went out occasionally. I liked him immediately and then more and more, as I knew him better. In fact, at that time, I thought it was "the real thing." I did everything I could to interest him (not knowing how he felt about me). Well, my efforts met with success and several months ago he told me he was very much in love with me. I had seen it coming, but instead of feeling happy about it I was unsure and frightened.

* * * *

My family and friends like him tremendously and my parents and he have discussed plans for marriage, the future, etc. However, I finally decided I had to tell him I was not certain of my feeling. He felt very badly about it, but took the attitude that it is natural for a girl to be hesitant, that, of course, I do love him and will be happy married to him. Since then, things have been like a see-saw.

* * * *

One week I am happy and think that definitely, at last, I am in love. Then, suddenly, apparently for no reason, there is an ache in my heart that is actually physical and I am very unhappy about the whole thing. All our friends think we are engaged because, in a happy moment, I told them we were going to be married. As things are between us, he is waiting for me to make up my mind definitely, and the indecision is becoming unbearable for both of us. I see him constantly, every day...

* * * *

He seems to have all the qualities of a model husband. We never have a quarrel or misunderstanding. Both of us are easygoing, and he has a particularly pleasant disposition. He has made a start in a profession in which I believe he has a future. Why, then, do I have this feeling of doubt? When I am alone with him, or with a few close friends, I am perfectly content and happy and have no doubts. But when we are out in a crowd, I begin to worry about what others think of him.

* * * *

It seems to be tremendously important to me that everyone should think him wonderful. Yet, if I really loved him, I don't imagine it would make any difference . . . It seems to me that the mere fact that I do have doubts is an indication that I do not care enough for him. From all I've heard, the period of a girl's engagement should be the happiest time of her life; she should be floating in a cloud. Can you give me any help or advice? I don't want to give him up entirely and yet I can't blame him for not wanting to be dangled while I make up my mind.

UNDECIDED.

Mirage of Love.

DEAR UNDECIDED: Whatever the nature of your attachment to the young man, I am sure it does not justify, and that it would not survive the test of, marriage. For your part, a conviction of fundamental kinship of mind and emotion—which constitutes an indispensable and irresistible element of civilized mate love—just doesn't exist. The man's emotional aloofness, or unreadable self-containment, during the early months of your association, plus his social and personal eligibility as a suitor or husband, no doubt captured your imagination to the point that you were constantly preoccupied with thought of him and so fancied yourself in love with him.

* * * *

But when he let down the bars of his reserve and revealed his real self to you—as a mere man, defenselessly and hungrily in love—you were startled and dismayed by the discovery that this personality was, in essence, both alien and unattractive to you. Most of his charm, his appeal, for you, had to do with his seeming to be something other than he actually is; and also, with his seeming invulnerability. It is rather a case of a strange, remote landscape's looking like the land of one's heart's desire under the witchery of moonlight and turning out to be the prosaic reverse when inspected at close range in the searching light of day.

* * * *

It is rather difficult, but nevertheless necessary, to throw off the spell of such a dream. So long as one continues exclusively to associate with the person who evoked the dream, one is apt to continue to try to convince one's self that the spell can be recaptured; that the dream was real, and that reality is delusive. One is tempted to try to lull one's keenest, most self preservative, most to be trusted faculties back to sleep, so that one may go on with the dream, which was fairer than current reality.

* * * *

The most conclusive awakening, the final release from all backward-looking concern with a disappointingly quick-lifting mirage of this sort, comes with falling really in love with a person of genuinely complementary qualities. But this cannot happen—at least, is definitely hindered from coming to pass—if one continues to identify one's self, both emotionally and in the eyes of the world, with the person whom one's psychic nature rebels against, as a presumably lifetime partner. It is just such a rebellion of your intuitive, subconscious self which has your conscious mind in continuous, self-doubting distress at the moment. While there are no overt reasons why you should not love and marry the man, the profound underlying truth is that you simply don't love him and, therefore, would be betraying yourself in marrying him.

* * * *

Love—real love—is the most personality-integrating of all experiences. When one finds one's self in the fortunate position of loving, and being loved by, some person with whom one feels the deepest psychic rapport, one has an elusive, an inexplicable sense of understanding the meaning, the purpose, of the universe; of apprehending the vital significance of one's personal—of all human—existence; of feeling that time, since it began, had been moving toward this hour and this transcendent, this magnificent experience; that one is moving in step with a mighty cosmic rhythm. One is lifted above concern about what others may think of one's beloved. Everything about him seems divinely right, and others blind who do not see him so. It is this feeling which (to quote your own words) makes "the period of a girl's engagement the happiest time of her life," a time when she is "floating in a cloud."

* * * *

If, given the privilege of choosing a mate from a wide variety of candidates, you do not wait for the coming of a man who can carry you away on a magic carpet of feeling to such an emotional stratosphere, you are simply cheating yourself. You are going for the ride, and not because the journey and the companion are ineluctably right for you. Of course, lots of women, bent on marriage and without much choice, are more or less forced to thumb a ride, accepting a catch-as-catch-can sort of lift. Some of them fare well enough; others not so well, and some very badly indeed. But a girl of 23, who can concentrate on a given man and bring him to hand as you did this chap, is under no such necessitous pressure; and when she finds he isn't the person she had, from a distance, supposed him to be, she ought at once to free him again and continue to seek the more satisfying partner.

Washable Mattress-Covers.

Although the mattress ticking needs an occasional "dry washing" with thick suds that will not soak through the surface, washable cotton covers are excellent temporary shields against dust and dirt. The fact that these extra coverings soil so readily is the best proof of their value as mattress protectors. They can be easily unbuttoned or untied for frequent trips to the tub.

Youthful Style For The Mature Figure

HERE is an outfit for the woman who wants to look smart and youthful, but not kiddish. It features broad-shouldered simplicity, which is the line to choose for the mature figure. It is of polka dotted rayon crepe in black or navy. The smart buttoned front closing and the pleated skirt give long and graceful lines to the figure. Note the tailored pockets and the self-fabric belt with front of contrasting leather. Effective now with white accessories.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendenning.

Healthful Summer Routine Keeps Infants Fit Today

The old dread that mothers had of the baby's second summer is fast disappearing. There is no reason for it any more.

Tradition had it that the second summer is very critical and that the baby must be sick some time in that period. But the situation has changed, and, as a matter of statistics, the summer months show less sickness for those under five years of age than any other part of the year.

None of us need as much food in the summer, and this includes the baby. "Less to eat and more to drink in the summer time," is the slogan of a wise old practitioner of my acquaintance.

The summer is a fine time to let the skin get acquainted with the air. Take all the baby's clothes off and let it roll around in the good air and sunshine on these warm days.

Fruit juices are important foods and should be added liberally to the diet of any baby during the first and second summer. Any fruit is all right, but oranges and tomato juice have the best supply of vitamin C. A half cup to a cup of tomato juice or the juice of a large orange every day is the proper ration. Sweet oranges to which no sugar has been added should be used. Before the orange is cut it should be dipped into boiling water and wiped with a clean cloth so that no germs get into the juice when it is squeezed.

The best preventive of overheating is cool water. Two or even three baths—without soap, of course—are not too much in hot weather. The stimulating effect of the cool bath is enhanced if it is thrown with some force on the body. So water from a hose or sprinkled on from a watering can is most refreshing.

In its second summer the baby begins to show some will power and selection about its food. It is more liable to eat irregularly. From this it becomes sick. Someone says: "Yes, naturally, it is sick: this is its second summer." It is the wrong food, or food eaten at irregular intervals, and not the second summer, that is at fault.

In fact, with all the improvements of modern life, the young mother should welcome rather than dread the second summer.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

THE MOVIES have always given the Nation a mistaken notion that all New Yorkers spend the heated months in beautiful—hence, sinful—penthouses. This is not true. Many of us who are confined here at this time roost in the usual airless cells, and mighty few of us indeed are as lucky as Miss Joan Crawford is in the pictures.

ALICE HUGHES

Scouting about for interesting and unusual summer dwelling places, I was tipped off to the nicest of the lot, and found this happy New York home resting at anchor at Port Washington, Long Island. It is nothing less than a wartime submarine chaser of the United States Navy, disarmed and turned into a home by two inspired and lucky people. The wife is Paula Trueman, clever comedienne of the perennial stage hit, "You Can't Take It With You," and the husband, Harold Sterner, one of the World's Fair architects. Once they had removed all bellicose signs, hung the chintz curtains and settled down, Paula and Harold called their little floating home, simply, "Mates." Cute, hey?

So is the former war-canoe, Paula, between shows, has done the ship-house over in blue and white. They argue a little about the proper clothes to wear while aboard, the actress holding out for sailor togs, and the architect saying that any old thing will do. Up to now this battle is a draw. But I tell you that there is no nicer, breezier and more attractive summer home around New York than the good ship "Mates." Remember the address. Just drop in on Paula and Harold and suggest a spot of grog—only with plenty of ice.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Little Sonja Henie looked as cute as one of the President's buttons as she passed through here on her way to the Norway vacation. Since it was raining and not snowing, the little Norse knight of St. Olav wore a big black umbrella instead of her silver skates, but the feature of the cutie's costume was a big halo hat with a little gold appliqued figure of a skating girl on the front, or due north of her forehead. She's a darling, that Sonja, and as nice as she is pretty and clever.

* * * *

The "Snow White" influence goes on and on, and so does its creator. The nicest party of the summer so far was given the other afternoon at the Radio City Music Hall in honor of quiet and modest Walt Disney, whose fame began with Mickey Mouse and who is now master of arts of both Yale and Harvard. For once in ages of these movie parties, the men far outnumbered the girls, so our little group did mighty well, such as we were. Walt is just as nice as he has always been painted, and everyone is glad that "Snow White's" profits will be so enormous, since he is going to spread them around among the help.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Nickel Squeezer.

Say, have you got any oranges in the house?"

"No; I was waiting until I could get over to the market. They're so much cheaper——"

"That's just like a woman! Walk six blocks to save a dime! Before I'd be that tight——"

"Yes; but you have to save on those little things."

"That's just the trouble with you! You're always saving on the little things and then let the big things go."

"That's not true! Didn't I get that new linen dress for $6.75, and it had been $12.95——"

"Yes, and what does it look like? The trouble with you is that you always pinch so on clothes . . . and important things that really count. I tell you, it never pays to buy cheap clothes——"

"Yes, but where's the money coming from?"

"You'd have plenty of money—if you managed right. Say, I wish you'd send this tie to the cleaner. It's got a spot."

"Oh, I can clean that in a minute."

"And save 20 cents! Say, you're the tightest woman I ever saw."

"Yes, but there's the insurance."

"That's next month. Don't cross the bridge till you get to it. Now look at me. I never worry. And I always manage to get three meals a day, don't I?"

"Yes, but——"

"Say, did you order that wedding present for Miss Perky?"

"No, I thought I'd try to get down town. There's a sale of silver——"

"Oh, don't buy anything at a sale! I can't give a girl in my office that way anything cheap. Get something nice—around $10."

"I could get a good present for $5, or at least $7.50——"

"No, I don't want to be tight about it. Say, are we going over to Aunt Bertha's tonight?"

"I suppose so, if I can ever get this house cleaned."

"Why don't you hire someone to do it? The whole trouble with you is you hate so to part with a dollar. Say, by the way, I think you better order Aunt Bertha a nice bouquet——"

"But we've just entertained her, and besides there are other things she needs worse——"

"Say, you'd squeeze a nickel till the buffalo hollered!"

"All right, I'll get the flowers. Anything else?"

"No, I believe not. Oh, yes; I wish you'd pay for my Palm Beach suit when it comes back from the cleaner, and if the man comes to clean the car, pay him, and—oh say, have you got any money in the house?"

"A little."

"Say, lend me $5, will you, until I get my pay check? I ran a little short of change this week."

Lids That Launder.

Putting a hat into the washtub sounds like something the Mad Duchess of Alice's Wonderland might do. Yet many of the smartest summer millinery modes are designed for quick sudsing and rinsing and easy ironing. After a thorough workout with the rest of the family laundry they have the bandbox look that has become a prime essential of high style.

Mingle Colors Lavishly for Summer Chic

Combinations Need Not Be Bread-and-Buttery to Be Orthodox.

Paris (U.P.).—Anything goes when it's a matter of combining colors for summer and early autumn wear. It is understood, of course, that there are certain combinations that are becoming as natural as butter spread on bread; dusty pink with black; red, white and blue; navy and white; blue and fuchsia; mustard or beige with black.

But there are other combinations which are perfectly orthodox and yet likely to be different than Mrs. Jones'. Take, for instance, the delightful mixture of chartreuse with violet. Schiaparelli uses the chartreuse for a flowing evening cape which is caught in the center of its back with a wide violet satin ribbon slipping over two slits and turning into a sash under the cape.

Deep royal purple is combined with rusty brown plush in one of Maggy Rouff's evening creations. The satin dress of the purple is made on straight lines broken only by the full godet of brown plush velvet which gushes out of one side.

Soft sage green makes Molyneux's tailleur, and bright red makes the scarf and accessories. More summery is the heliotrope wool suit whose seams are visible and whipped on the outside with heavy brown wool threads. Brown and blue (and it's navy blue at that) meet more than once in Paris prints.

Vera Borea found a print with a navy background and pansies of brown and yellow shades. Chanel seized upon a soft silk print which gradually changed its navy and white pattern to a brown and white pattern as it went neckward from the hem.

Although all shades of red, white and blue are combined successfully, one of the most attractive mixtures is obtained by using a pale robin's egg blue with a scarlet red and white.

7-Up Team Meets Milwaukee Today

The 7-Up Athletic Club will meet the Old Milwaukee Brewers this afternoon on the West Ellipse at 5 o'clock and Thursday will find them tangling with National Savings on the East Ellipse at the same time.

Manager "Connie" Wyche will have a real treat in store for the fans when he sends the "Old Iron Man," "Lefty" McIntire, to the mound, his first appearance on the sandlots in Washington this season. The reason he was tagged the "Old Iron Man" is because he pitched Saturday against Warsaw and won his game, 2-1, and lost the decision Sunday, 1-0, against Winchester.

When "Lefty" donned a 7-Up uniform it was his eighty-fifth different ball team he has played for, "one for Rippley," a record that will be hard for another pitcher to surpass.

Sunday will find 7-Up traveling to Fredericksburg, Va., for a game with the Red Sox, and they will try for revenge, as the Red Sox won the first game, 2-0. McIntire will be on the mound, with either Wright or Jarvis catching.

Jury Exonerates Jockey in Death

Ellicott City, Md., July 11 (AP).—A coroner's jury late today freed Jockey Ralph Eccard of all criminal responsibility in the death of Mrs. Sadie May Wells, who was fatally burned April 24 following a collision involving Eccard's automobile.

Testimony today showed Mrs. Wells was sitting in the rumble seat of a parked car with William Wood. Eccard's car struck the parked vehicle and Wood threw Mrs. Wells from the wrecked and burning automobile.

She landed in a flaming pool of gasoline and was burned to death. At the time Eccard was driving from his home at Crewsville, Md., to the Havre de Grace race track, where he was riding. The other car was disabled and was awaiting a tow to Baltimore.

An infielder, Blattner will join the team immediately. He will not complete high school until next February. The young St. Louis athlete is a coholder of the world's doubles table tennis championship.

Justice and Mrs. Coke of Hawaii Feted by Cummingses at Ruthven

Judge Parker, of N. C., and Mr. Haskell, of Boston, Share Spotlight at Cool, Informal Party on Terrace of Attorney General's Home.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Ruthven, Rock Creek Park home of the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, was the scene of a gay gathering last evening when Chief Justice James L. Coke, of the Supreme Court of Hawaii, and Mrs. Coke were guests of honor at a buffet supper.

Informality was the keynote of the party, which got under way on the cool terrace of Ruthven at 7 o'clock and was still going strong as midnight approached. On their first visit to Washington in some time, Justice and Mrs. Coke had the opportunity to renew acquantanceships with several of their Capital friends whom they have not seen in several years.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Last evening's host and hostess visited the Cokes a couple of years ago when on a trip to Hawaii, and Justice Coke and the Attorney General have been close friends for many years. Perhaps everone who ever has been to Honolulu has heard of Justice Coke, whose name and fame have been widely known since he was first appointed Chief Justice of Hawaii in 1918. Four years later he retired from the bench and went into private law practice.

In 1934, he was reappointed chief justice, in which capacity he is still serving. He and Mrs. Coke, who came to Washington Saturday, have been at the Shoreham Hotel, but leave today for New York, whence they will sail tomorrow on the Manhattan for a vacation of several weeks in Europe. They will return to this country on the Normandie on August 29, and their many friends here are hoping they will come back to Washington for a visit before going on to their Honolulu home.

Twenty Guests Attend Terrace Party

Talk turned frequently to Hawaii last evening, as Justice and Mrs. Coke took turns at recounting some of their fascinating experiences there. Among other guests on whom the spotlight of special attention fell were Judge John J. Parker, of Monroe, N. C., who is making a short visit in Washington, and George D. Haskell, of Boston.

The Capital City in general may have sweltered in the mid-summer heat last evening, but guests of the Cummingses were unaware of it. Since Ruthven is high on a hill, breezes that missed most of the other part of Washington curled around the group of 20 guests who assembled on the terrace and spent most of the evening enjoying a fine sample of the Cummings' hospitality.

Training courses for all phases of recreational leadership given there and in 24 other centers throughout the country are planned by the Girl Scout national personnel division at headquarters in New York City. Dr. Lillian M. Gilbreth, of Montclair, N. J., vice chairman of the Girl Scout national board of directors, is chairman of the division, with Miss Agnes Leahy, of New York City, as executive secretary.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Homely but Faithful.

Not how you look, but what you do,
Will guide all estimates of you.
—Old Mother Nature.

There are some homely people in the Great World, but few if any are homelier than Bullhead the Horned Pout, who lives in the Smiling Pool. Anyway, that is the way Sue and Sammy felt about the matter, and they did not hesitate to say so.

"I think he's horrid to look at," declared Sue.

Her cousin, Farmer Brown's Boy, chuckled. "I guess perhaps you are right, Sue," said he. "He may be horrid to look at, but he has his good points. Yes, sir, Bullhead has his good points."

"He has points, all right," agreed Sammy, and grinned somewhat ruefully at the laugh that followed.

Sammy was still nursing a sore hand, the result of a recent fishing trip, when ignorance and excitement had combined to lead him to grasp carelessly the Bullhead he had just caught. He had thus discovered the so-called horn, the sharp spine that is always ready for the unwary, to avenge its owner.

"I suppose you wouldn't call that a really good point, but he has some good ones, just the same," said Tommy.

"As what, for instance?" demanded Sammy.

"He is good eating," replied Tommy.

"Sammy thought so, to judge by the way he ate those Bullheads we had for dinner the other night," said Sue.

"Point one," agreed Sammy. "You said points.

"Mr. and Mrs. Bullhead are good parents," said Tommy.

"Don't make me laugh," retorted Sammy. "Fish don't even know their children. They lay their eggs and go off and forget 'em."

"That is true of most fishes, I will admit, but it isn't true of Mr. and Mrs. Bullhead," declared Tommy.

"Are you telling us that that ugly mud lover cares about anything excepting the filling of his stomach?" cried Sammy.

Tommy nodded. "I'll admit that Mr. and Mrs. Bullhead are ugly looking and that they love to poke about in the mud and that there is nothing pleasant about them excepting their flesh when it is cooked, but, just the same, they are good parents. What is more, they work together in preparing a place for the eggs and in looking after the children after the eggs hatch," asserted Tommy. "I know, because I have watched them," he added.

"Watched them what?" Sue wanted to know.

"Watched them prepare the nest,

Bullhead is homely, but he is faithful to his own.

for one thing," replied Tommy. "If you were here in the spring, you could watch them, too.

"How do they do it?" Sue wanted to know.

"Oh," replied Tommy, "they pick out a place where the water is shallow and the bottom gravelly or sandy, and usually under a log or something. They make a little irregular saucer-shaped place by removing all the pebbles and coarse gravel, sucking it up in their mouths and carrying it off until they have a nice, clean, sandy nest. Then mother deposits the eggs there and father watches over them and drives away any who happen to come along that way. He is right on the job every minute.

Sammy looked down at Bullhead with new interest. "He doesn't look it," he declared. "I mean he doesn't look as if he knew enough to do that, or would have any feelings about the matter one way or the other."

"You never can tell just by looks," replied Tommy.

"I'll say you can't," agreed Sammy.

"When the eggs hatch both father and mother are said to watch over them. I know father does. When the little fishes are big enough they are led away from the nest and looked after in just the same way that a Hen looks after her chickens. This is done until the youngsters begin to scatter and shift for themselves. Bullhead is homely, but he is faithful to his own. If you don't believe it, come next spring and I'll prove it to you."

Hughes Roars Over Germany; Wheel Broken

Hughes

ords for Atlantic crossings by piloting in 16 hours 38 minutes his twin-motored Lockheed over the Great Circle route from New York to Paris—the route blazed by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh 11 years ago.

This was less than half the time of Lindbergh's flight in the "Spirit of St. Louis" in 1927

Hughes' take-off for Moscow was delayed until after midnight while his plane was repaired. Hughes had intended to take off at dawn, but he was awakened shortly after 11 p. m. and notified of changing weather conditions on his route into Russia.

After studying weather charts, he decided on an immediate take-off. The plane was wheeled out on the airfield, and Hughes sent her into the air on the 1,500-mile flight to Moscow, eight hours and 34 minutes after landing here from New York.

Flies Over Belgium.

His route was over the city of Liege, Belgium, to the northeast of Paris, then over Cologne on the Rhine.

He expected to reach the German border an hour after taking off from Le Bourget, heading from that point almost due East, past Berlin and to Warsaw. He did not plan to land at any of these points, continuing non-stop to Moscow.

Hughes spent 15 minutes closely studying maps, while the two 1,100-horsepower motors were turning over in front of the hangar. Due to the fact European airways are not usually well lighted, as American courses are, it was necessary to mark natural landmarks to guide his navigators.

The plane was taken far out on the end of the runway for military planes because a pile of loose dirt blocked the north end. Hughes seemed to fight the plane as it roared over the field, but it took into the air smoothly and in a few seconds it was lost from view.

Parts Loaned for Tail.

Before taking off, Hughes spoke briefly over a French radio network, thanking the French for their prompt aid in repairing the plane. Parts for repairing the tail assembly were lent by Air France.

Hughes expected to take seven and a half to eight hours for the Moscow hop.

With the exception of a faulty compass and minor radio mishaps, including loss of the trailing antennae, the Atlantic hop had been uneventful. Once, about half way over, Hughes radioed the fuel supply might run short, but when the plane landed there were 300 gallons in the tanks. He had averaged 218 miles an hour on the trip.

Hughes drove his course on the line, cutting the southwest tip of Ireland exactly as he planned, heading for the French coast and dropping out of the clouds over Paris at 4:58 p. m., Paris time (10:58 a. m., E. S. T.).

Bullitt Opens Door.

United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt sprinted across the runway to open the door of the plane.

Obviously tired from the long trick at the controls, Hughes nevertheless went to work immediately on weather charts while lanky Ed Lund, his flight engineer, supervised refuelling the plane. French mechanics pulled off the cowling of the two motors and began checking them.

"Plenty of gas left," one of the field crew said.

Hughes went into the hangar and began swallowing some onion soup and was half way through a steak when he was summoned back to the plane. He loped across the runway with a French chef chasing him with the steak, which he insisted on shoving into the cabin of the plane.

Meanwhile, French air experts were warm in their praise of the flight, particularly the navigation of Lieut. Thomas L. Thurlow. They pointed out he hit the "two dots"—the tip of Ireland and Paris—perfectly, in spite of the fact the plane flew "blind" for eight hours during the night.

The Hughes Log On Moscow Hop

Following is the radio log of Howard Hughes' flight from Paris with Moscow as his destination:

7:24 p. m.—Took off from Le Bourget Field, near Paris, for Moscow by way of Liege, Cologne, Berlin and Warsaw.

7:45 p. m.—The following message received direct from the Hughes plane by the Chatham, Mass., station of the Radiomarine Corporation:

"Left Paris few minutes ago. Flying blind. Please advise all."

9:32 p. m. (Eastern standard time)—Hughes, in a National Broadcasting Co. broadcast, said he was over Germany, had been flying "blind" since leaving Paris, was making 185 miles per hours at 16,000 feet altitude and that he and his four companions were using their oxygen supply.

Houghton, Golf Pro, Is Sued for Divorce

Albert "Al" Houghton, former Washington golf professional, now attached to a Virginia course, yesterday was sued in District Court by his wife, Hazel Houghton, 317 Tenth street northeast, for divorce on grounds of desertion. She asked permanent alimony for herself and their two children.

Mrs. Houghton alleged that her husband was now residing in Old Point Comfort, Va. She said they were married in 1922. They lived together until about three years ago, Mrs. Houghton charged.

Treasury Register Dolan 'Willing' to Oppose Lonergan

Fresh indication that the New Deal will not let the Democratic senatorial nomination in Connecticut go to Senator Augustine Lonergan without a struggle was given yesterday when Edward G. Dolan, Register of the Treasury, announced his willingness to be "drafted" on a platform of "100 per cent for Franklin D. Roosevelt without equivocation."

The statement by Dolan, who is a "Roosevelt before Chicago" man and as a New Deal appointee is expected to be followed by a similar announcement from Representative Herman Kopplemann, of Connecticut's First District. Already Archibold McNeil, former Democratic national committeeman from Connecticut, has announced for the nomination.

Dolan outlined a 24-point program, including Government reorganization, Federal control of power rights, a stronger wage-hour act, and opposition to "any attempt to lower the $1,000 exemption for single persons and the $2,500 exemption for married couples on income taxes."

Girl, 10, Repulses Man Who Tried to Attack Her

A 10-year-old white girl yesterday afternoon repulsed a man who attempted to attack her as she was walking on the railroad tracks near Naylor road and Fairlawn avenue southeast.

She told Eleventh Precinct police the man offered her 50 cents, then attempted to drag her to woods nearby, but ran when she threatened to call police.

4½-Day World Flight Possible, Adviser Says

Hughes' Representative Puts Distance at 14,710 Miles.

New York, July 11 (U.P.).—Barring unforeseen difficulties, Howard Hughes will fly around the world in 4 and one-half days, Albert I. Lodwick, the millionaire flier's personal representative, predicted tonight on the basis of Hughes' speedy flight to Paris.

The total distance to be covered in theflight is 14,710 miles, Lodwick said. The distance from Paris to Moscow is 1,675 miles. From Moscow Hughes will fly to Krasnoyarski, Russia, a distance of 2,281 miles. The next stop, according to Hughes' schedule, will be at Yakutsk, Russia, a distance of 1,277 miles. From there he plans to fly to Fairbanks, Alaska, a 2,456-mile jump. From there he will fly to New York, a distance of 3,380 miles.

The total of the five jumps is 11,069 miles. This mileage, added to the 3,641 miles covered on the transatlantic flight, makes a total of 14,710 miles for the world flight, Lodwick said.

The wives of three members of Howard Hughes' crew of transatlantic fliers took the news of their husbands' safe arrival at Paris today with the calmness of veteran "flying widows."

Mrs. Harry P. Connor and Mrs. Thomas L. Thurlow, whose husbands are navigators of the Hughes' plane, both agreed the flight was "wonderful," and Mrs. Thurlow added:

"We were never really worried. We were quite sure they would make it."

Only Mrs. Thurlow's 3-year-old son seemed visibly excited. He raced around the suite where Mrs. Thurlow and Mrs. Connor are staying at the Barbizon-Plaza, shouting:

"Daddy's in Paris! Daddy's in Paris!"

Mrs. Richard Stoddart, brown-eyed, youthful wife of the radio engineer aboard Hughes' plane, sat up all night listening to reports from her husband, ports declined only from $1,532,000 to $1,071,000.

'Boycott' of Japanese Goods By U.S. Citizens Blow to Trade

Boycott

Silk is one of the items trade spokesmen said would not necessarily indicate the extent of a boycott during hard times, as silk purchases normally fall off during a depression period. Definite evidence of the effectiveness of a silk boycott, it was said, must await further improvement in general business conditions, and the corresponding reaction of the silk trade.

Less Tuna Fish Bought.

But observers here said the present business recession could not account for more severe declines in imports of such Japanese items as canned tuna fish and electric lamps, competitively shipped for a low price market.

Imports of canned Japanese tuna dropped from 6,144,000 pounds in the first five months of 1937 to 1,632,000 pounds in the first five months of this year, a value reduction from $1,189,000 to $326,000.

Toy Imports Cut to Third.

Japanese electric bulbs, 47,326,000 of which poured into this country during the first five months of 1937, were reduced in volume in the first five months of this year to 10,446,000, a cut in terms of dollars from $342,000 to $99,000.

Imports of Japanese toys were cut to about a third. Against $142,000 of dolls and parts in the first five months of 1937, only $54,000 were imported in the corresponding period this year, while other imported Japanese toys declined from $642,000 to $243,000.

Sharper declines were noted in imports of cotton products, but this was attributed to Japanese use of cotton for military purposes.

Some Japanese imports, labeling of which would not catch the eye of the purchaser, increased during the early part of this year. Zipper imports from Japan doubled. Imports of Pyrethrum flowers (which can only be obtained in Japan, and are used in insect powder manufacture) increased from $533,000 to $724,000 in value.

Exports to Japan Drop.

During the same period American exports to Japan were reduced, but the decrease was not so marked. Value of Japanese imports from America decreased from $140,447,000 in the first five months of 1937 to $109,659,000 in the corresponding period this year.

This was in a large measure attributed to the increasing difficulty of obtaining exchange permits in Japan, which the Commerce Department recently said is "a matter of growing concern to Japanese importers." The department recently advised American exporters to "have a confirmed irrevocable letter of credit in their hands before accepting orders for shipment to Japan."

The department said Japanese importers have no means of foretelling in advance whether their applications for exchange permits will be granted and "private Japanese importers are obviously not in a position to bind the ministry of finance in this matter."

Food Cost Up 1.3% For May and June

Food costs increased 1.3 per cent during the month ended June 14, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday.

Isador Lubin, commissioner of the bureau, said this was due chiefly to a 5.7 per cent increase in the prices of certain fresh fruits and vegetables. Potato and apple prices advanced substantially.

N. Y. Adopts Ban On Wire-Tapping

Albany, N. Y., July 11 (U.P.).—The New York State constitutional convention tonight adopted a proposed amendment prohibiting unreasonablesearches, seizures and wire tapping. The vote was 89 to 72.

The action of the convention was a distinct victory for District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

Britain's Plan Recalls 2,000 A Day in Spain

Spain

committee's volunteer plan, the Associated Press said.

[In a note handed the British Foreign Office the Barcelona government declared Italy had poured 7,000 soldiers, 334 of them aviators, into insurgent Spain since Britain and Italy signed a friendship pact April 16.

[The note, declared that "in event of Italy being forced to yield to British pressure" for withdrawal of soldiers aiding the insurgents "some 10,000 men, most of them incapacitated and sick, would be transferred to Italy."

["The remainder of the Italian tropos would be incorporated into the Spanish Foreign Legion as volunteers . . ." the note charged.—Editor's note]

Task Complicated.

The complicated task facing the nonintervention committee in its effort to reduce the Spanish war to the status of a struggle among Spaniards only, is reflected in the "Blue Book" on the subject printed by the government tonight. This program, embodied in eighty closely printed pages, reaffirms and extends the existing nonintervention agreement; provides for the withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain; for the grant in certain circumstances of belligerent rights to the two parties in Spain; and for neutral observation of the Spanish frontiers by land and sea.

The whole scheme, estimated to cost £2,750,000 ($13,475,000), will not begin to function until it has been accepted by both the Barcelona and Burgos governments, to whom it was submitted last week. If these governments accept, they may do so with reservations which will occasion another meeting of the nonintervention committee.

The period required for two international commissions to go to Spain to take a census of foreign volunteers and for evacuation camps to be established is estimated in the blue book at 45 days. On the forty-sixth day, the first daily quota of foreign volunteers will be drafted into the evacuation areas and by the 100th day they would have completed the evacuation and shipment home of foreign volunteers, other than sick and wounded and prisoners of war.

Another 35 days would be allowed for the transfer from the evacuation areas of sick and wounded foreign volunteers and prisoners of war, as well as all women foreign volunteers. Some time would be required by the two commissions to verify that no foreign volunteers remained unevacuated. By the time the commissions had completed their labor and disbanded themselves, it is estimated 164 days would have elapsed.

From the battle lines the volunteers are to be transferred to evacuation areas set up in the vicinity of Cadiz, Malaga, Cartagena and Palamos, at the rate of 2,000 or more a day. They will be shipped home by way of such ports as London, Hamburg, Lisbon, Marseilles and Genoa, depending upon their respective homelands.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Presidential Special, Quanah, Tex., July 11, 1938.

An indiscreet youth at the last stop was provoked because the Presidential train was late, forcing him to work overtime.

"A guy ought to be shot for arriving here at midnight," said the young buck, who had a date with a cutie.

Within an hour the President's secret service men had him on the pan. Sweating profusely, he finally convinced them he was just spoofing and that he really loves the President.

• • • •

After a brief chat with Gov. Jimmy Allred of Texas, it's easy to understand why President Roosevelt took such a shine to him and made him a Federal judge on the rear platform of this train; Jimmy has oodles of Texas winsomeness and a top-notch mind. His future is bright, maybe the Senate in 1940, or the Supreme Court during F. D. R.'s unlikely third term, or a 100-to-1 shot at the White House. The South is over-due for the Presidency.

Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt. . . . intelligent brow

• • • •

Occasionally this train bounces and lurches exactly like an ordinary train, without a President aboard. Speeding automobiles pass us up, too, at 70 miles an hour where the good highways parallel the tracks.

• • • •

But the choo-choo is still the most comfortable way to travel, taking shower baths, getting hair cuts, having your pants pressed, eating in a diner with the seats against the wall like a French restaurant, shaving with an electric razor and creating Federal judges.

"—the political prance"

In Texas the flow of politics on and off the President's train reached high tide. Texans are more informal about such things, and even young Democrats crashed the President's car to shake the No. 1 hand. . . . They all emerge with that peculiar high knee action characteristic of a man who can go home and tell the wife at supper: "So I told the President."

• • • •

One of the few conspicuous Harvardisms in Mr. Roosevelt's platform speeches is his pronunciation of the word "been." When he says, "I have been here before," he gives the verb the "bean" sound, to rhyme with "seen" instead of "sin." Most of us pronounce it "bin." A few stations back he told the crowd that he hoped some day to travel through "by motor" with more leisure, and quickly changed it to "automobile." The President is making about three times as many rear platform appearances as had been anticipated. He wore a plaid blue and green necktie with his seersucker suit today.

• • • •

This morning the beauteous Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt appeared on the train to ride a ways with her father-in-law, in a suede hat which I thought was pinkish but which a lady assures me is old rose. At the first stop she stood on the rear platform, taking movies of the crowd and of F. D. R. speaking. She is as lovely as any of the Presidential daughters-in-law, with an intelligent brow, and looked very diminutive beside the two Roosevelt men in Amon Carter's 10-gallon hats.

"Not like the old South"

The expedition has just skirted the old South where the President paid his respects to the "feudalists" a few months ago. There the aristocracy might have retaliated by sitting still in its rocking chairs while the train passed. But this is not the old South. One substantial citizen who thinks three-fourths of the New Deal is wrong told me his section would vote 75 to 90 per cent for a third term. Another gentleman, however, confided to me that though he was a member of the reception committee, he had lingered well away from the President, so he wouldn't have to shake hands with him. Seemed to derive a lot of satisfaction from that, too.

• • • •

At every station the camera fiends are out in force. Even at the tiniest hamlets a hundred or more candid and movie cameras are leveled at the rear platform. Some of them have big extension lenses and look like dangerous blunderbusses. Every shot that's developed will show other cameras shooting right back from other angles.

• • • •

To preserve the more languid and delicate of the entourage from the ferocious sun, loudspeakers have been installed in the diner, where they sit and listen while the President speaks on the rear platform. After a score of brief, extemporaneous speeches, the mimics have mastered the formula, and often can guess quite effectively what he will say, two or three minutes in advance. But he hasn't yet failed to spring some quip or comment of special local application. One Congressman sprung the big surprise, though; he used the Presidential loud speaker to announce his own next few political meetings.

Lewis Denies Ticket Link In Campaign

Says He's Lone Wolf in Primary Race; G.O.P. Considers Slate.

Baltimore, July 11.—Representative David J. Lewis today spiked reports of a possible hookup between his senatorial candidacy and Maryland's gubernatorial campaign with a statement he "started in neutral" and intended to "remain neutral."

His assertion was apparently designed to end rumors "Little Davey" would seek added strength in his fight against Senator Millard E. Tydings by aligning with any of the six Democrats now seeking the gubernatorial nomination—or a seventh not yet announced.

The seventh, with whom Lewis' name has been linked, was Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, whose political plans remain a question mark in the campaign.

"I am making no hookup with any gubernatorial candidate," said Lewis. "They are different subjects, one Federal and one State."

Regarding Byrd, he added: "I don't know anything about Dr. Byrd's plans. His friends have not approached me. I say this, of course, without any prejudice to him."

Lewis spoke at Perryville tonight, while Senator Tydings and Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, were in Davidsonville, in Anne Arundel County.

Both Tydings and O'Conor said their appearances were informal get-acquainted sessions.

Republicans, meanwhile, following the example of their leader, Gov. Harry W. Nice—who contends "it's too hot to campaign right now"—labored in leisurely fashion over the ticket Gov. Nice expects to head in the general election in November.

Under consideration at the moment, but by no means definitely decided upon, were Harry Mertz, State purchasing agent from Anne Arundel County, for State comptroller, and Wendell Allen, Baltimore attorney, for attorney general. As Senate possibilities, the slate-makers have such names as former Judge Robert F. Duer, of Princess Anne; Jacob France, of Baltimore, and several others up for discussion.

Party strategists said their principal primary campaigning would be done in races for the General Assembly, with little activity expected so far as State-wide offices are concerned until after the September 12 primaries are over.

State Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., shifted his Democratic gubernatorial bandwagon into high speed today with the opening of campaign headquarters here and arrangement of speaking dates which will keep him moving until August 3.

Gas Tax Diversion Hit.

Cambridge, Md., July 11 (AP).—Herbert M. Brune, jr., candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, struck tonight at the diversion of gasoline taxes from the road fund and asserted that only a reduction in State expenditures would make such diversion unnecessary.

In an address at the American Legion carnival here, Brune, self-styled "independent candidate," from Baltimore, declared that "only an independent Governor who goes into office with no political obligations can reduce the expenses of government and place the financial affairs of the State on a sound basis."

Ryan Is Candidate.

Cumberland, Md., July 11 (AP).—Edward J. Ryan, chairman of the O'Conor-for-Governor committee of Allegany County, today announced he would seek the Democratic nomination to the House of Representatives from the Sixth Maryland District.

All Maryland Swelters in Torrid Wave

Mercury Tops 90-Mark; 4 Are Drowned Seeking Relief.

By the Associated Press.

Marylanders perspired in sizzling temperatures today as virtually every corner of the State reported soaring thermometers ambitious to equal or better marks set in the past two days.

Little prospects for quick relief were seen, with only partly cloudy to clear weather in store for today.

The "heavy wave" that brought Baltimore its hottest night of the summer Sunday was accompanied by four drownings.

In the metropolitan area the mercury climbed into the 90's but a breeze held the heat below the 97-maximum of yesterday.

In Western Maryland, Cumberland reported temperatures in the 90's following yesterday's 95 peak. For the fourth day, Hagerstown simmered under a summer sun that raised the temperature into the 90's.

A south breeze softened summer's onslaught at Annapolis, where the temperature was a comparative cool 88 degrees.

The Eastern Shore wasn't spared the heat, Salisbury reporting a 94-degree top and Cambridge 93 degrees.

Suspended Cleric Refused Right to Quit Before Trial

Richmond, Va., July 11 (AP).—Dr. J. J. Scherer, jr., head of the Lutheran Church of Virginia, said today the Rev. C. Worthington Lowe, suspended pastor of the Fashionable Grace Lutheran Church of Winchester, "could not resign while under discipline."

Dr. Scherer said the Winchester pastor had submitted his resignation, but that it could not be accepted until the suspension had been passed upon at the convention of the Lutheran Synod in Virginia, to be held in Roanoke in January.

The Synod head said under the church's constitution a Lutheran clergyman couldn't resign while under suspension.

Winchester, Va., July 11 (AP).—The Rev. C. Worthington Lowe, recently suspended as pastor of the Grace Lutheran Church here after a committee representing the Lutheran Synod of Virginia found him guilty of "transgressions," said today he had organized a Lutheran church here with a membership of 150. Mr. Lowe said the new church would operate independently of any synod.

1938 Tobacco Crop To Exceed Quota

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Crop Reporting Board's first estimates today of 1938 tobacco production indicated crops in excess of marketing quotas which have been imposed on the three principal types under the new farm act.

Although the total indicated production of all types of 1,496,644,000 pounds was 3.7 per cent below last year's 1,553,405,000-pound harvest, crops topping the quotas for flue-cured, burley and dark air and fire-cured tobaccos were forecast.

Flue-cured tobacco production, grown in Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida and Alabama and accounting for more than half the Nation's tobacco crop, was estimated at 801,700,000 pounds, compared with a marketing quota of 733,000,000 pounds and 1937 harvest of 854,882,000 pounds.

Tobacco Festival Will Open Sept. 8

Plans have been made to have a continuous series of activities beginning at 10 a. m., Thursday morning, September 8, and concluding with the queen's ball, held in a pavillion of 75,000 square feet of floor space, "sometime Saturday morning." The only lull in the activities will be during the early hours of Friday morning, when the merrymakers will catch up with their sleep.

Price Asked To Pardon 3 Strike Pickets

Petition States Peace Has Been Restored in Strife-Torn Covington.

Richmond, Va., July 11 (AP).—Gov. Price today was asked to pardon three persons sentenced to jail last year by Circuit Judge Benjamin Haden on the charge that they violated his injunction prescribing picketing limitations in the strike at the Industrial Rayon Corporation's Covington plant.

The petition was signed by Robert W. Gaffney, a field organizer for the T. W. O. C., who was sentenced to 12 months in jail; Lloyd Mays, a Covington officer of the Synthetic Yarn Federation, who received nine months, and Mrs. Shirley Wright, who was sentenced to a month.

In the petition filed with Raymond Jackson, secretary of the Commonwealth, by the office of Leon Bazile, Richmond attorney, the three said they were not present at a disturbance outside a plant gate July 7, 1937.

Contempt proceedings were brought in the Alleghany County Court after this disturbance on the ground that it violated the court's order enjoining strikers from certain practices.

The trio were held responsible, however, for a part in the disturbance marked by some fist-fighting and the overturning of an automobile containing nonunion workers who were coming into the plant.

The petition for the pardons stated that industrial peace now reigns in Covington after full settlement of the strike, but that to force Gaffney, Mays and Mrs. Wright to serve their sentences would disturb that industrial accord.

The text of the petition was not made public by Jackson pending action by the Governor upon it.

The Virginia Supreme Court June 3 refused to grant the three a writ of error on their contention that they were not present at the disturbance.

The strike at Covington began as a sit-down, but the workers soon came out and began to picket.

In connection with the strike, the National Labor Relations Board conducted an election and certified the Synthetic Yarn Federation as legal bargaining agency for the strikers.

The meeting was called by Col. W. A. Johnson, district engineer of the War Department.

Virginia Auto Registration Gains 5.6%

State Tops Nation in Percentage Increase for 1937.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 11.—Virginia had a greater percentage increase in motor vehicle registration than the Nation as a whole during the year 1937, it is shown in a survey in the current issue of American Highways.

Virginia, with a total registration of 440,713 motor vehicles in 1937 had an increase of 5.6 per cent over 1936 as compared with the increase for the Nation of 5.5 per cent. There were 23,250 more vehicles registered in the State last year than during the previous year, while the Nation showed an increase of 1,539,670, or a total of 29,705,220.

Virginia showed a slightly higher percentage of increase than did North Carolina, Maryland, West Virginia, Tennessee and the District of Columbia. South Carolina, however, revealed a 6.2 per cent gain in vehicles.

Receipts from tag sales and other fees came to $6,153,000 in Virginia during 1937, while the national figure was $399,613,000. Both North Carolina and West Virginia topped the Old Dominion in receipts collected, but other nearby States fell below the total collected in this State.

Richmond, Va., July 11 (AP).—Department store sales in the Fifth Federal Reserve District for the first six months of this year fell 5 per cent below the total for the same period last year, the Richmond Federal Reserve Bank reported today.

Man's Absence Delays Postoffice Site Deal

Ellicott City, Md., July 11 (AP).—Everybody in town is interested in the whereabouts of James Fowble, a former sailor.

He has a claim to a ninth part of one of three lots on which a new $90,000 postoffice is to be built. Until he is located and signs a purchase paper, work can't be started on the postoffice. Attorneys trying to locate him said Fowble was last reported at Norfolk, Va.

When this small ad appeared in The Post the other day—

REFRIGERATOR. Electric Cold Spot; large size; excellent condition; $35; leaving city. 3717 Woodley Rd. CLe. 0007.

12 Post readers wanted to buy the refrigerator. The lady had only one to sell; the other 11 Post readers are probably still looking in the miscellaneous-for-sale column for such a bargain. If you want to sell a refrigerator or anything else, phone Miss Mack, National 4200.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Hinterland Theater Managers Have Their Booking Troubles

Small-Town Motion Picture House Operators Voice Laments in Trade Journal Symposium; Calling All Guild Subscribers; Mr. Schloss Is Right; Notes.

AT THIS sultry season of the year, when vital news somehow seems not to be oozing out of the theater's every pore, it is a favorite device of the urban commentator to refer to the "What the Picture Did for Me" department of the Motion Picture Herald, foremost of the motion picture industry's trade journals, and see how the boys and girls out at the flag stations and whistle stops are getting along with their theaters.

BELL.

There probably is no more eloquent expression of a cross-section of American picture-theaterdom than this. Some of the comments are pungently humorous; other are unintentionally so. All of them, however, speak the voice of the box-office in their respective communities. Have a look.

Mr. Harland Rankin, of the Plaza Theater, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada, for example, recently ran Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Between Two Women," featuring Franchot Tone and Virginia Bruce, and had this to say: "As nice a picture as you could ask for—but it didn't make film rental."

It would be interesting to learn Mr. Rankin's private appraisal of the perceptive faculties of his patrons.

Gladys E. McArdle, on the other hand, permits her public to write its own ticket. Miss McArdle operates the Owl Theater, in Lebanon, Kans., and seems to have given her playhouse a significant name. Of Laurel and Hardy in "Swiss Miss" she has this to say: "I wish M.-G.-M. would make one of these features every two months, for they are just what the patrons want. Went over the best of any show in months. Personally, I thought it was the worst show I ever saw, but 'the customer is always right.'"

Wayne Campbell, of the Maxine Theater, Croswell, Mich., seems not to be quite "sold" on Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," the Technicolor cartoon-fantasy that has captured the imagination of the world and will wind up its career probably with the most amazing gross receipts in the history of the cinema—not excepting "The Birth of a Nation." To give Mr. Campbell due credit, however, he is of the opinion that "Disney did very well on this one. I put out plenty of advertising, but somehow the public didn't come this way. A great deal of patrons (sic) were disappointed. I think the ballyhoo on this production made the people expect too much."

Well, Mr. Campbell, that's what makes horse racing!

Richard C. Welch, who conducts the Comique Theater, in Camden, Me., must find it a little difficult to determine precisely what bearing his picture has on the total "draw" of his house. Of "The Divorce of Lady X," which recently played a successful engagement at RKO-Keith's, he writes: "This was played on a money night when the money was high. Due to censoring of this in Massachusetts, we advertised, 'no one under 16 years admitted. Take the whole three things, a large money night award, the age limit and beautiful Technicolor (which is about all I can say for the picture), made for us a good day's business."

What we would like to know is, how did the fellow who won the money like the picture?

Then there is the case of "Jezebel," starring Bette Davis, with Henry Fonda, Fay Bainter and George Brent. Frank Templin, of the Strand Theater, Kendallville, Ind., with something almost akin to clairvoyance, estimates its value in these words: "Opinion very divided. Should do all right in spots where this type of entertainment is wanted by the customers."

You said it, Mr. Templin!

Of the same picture, Walt Potamkin, whose house is the Cedar Theater, in Philadelphia, Pa., remarks succinctly: "This one laid an egg."

Little wonder that producers with any hair left find it turning gray!

A message of some urgency is relayed to the public, through this column, by Bess Davis Schreiner, Washington sales manager for the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington. Those on the books of the organizations named, for the subscription series of six plays for the season of 1938-39, are requested to call at the local box-office of the society, in the National Theater, any afternoon this week to verify their reservations. Since April 1, when the subscription books were opened for next season, more than 3,500 requests for seats have been received—three times the number on record at this time last July—which is evidence enough of public interest in a season that promises such sterling plays as the Lunts in "The Sea Gull," "Of Mice and Men," "Our Town," "Golden Boy" and others of the Broadway leaders of last season. Miss Schreiner will be in the Guild-American Society office every afternoon this week between the hours of 12 noon and 5:30 p. m.

Under the astute guidance of Leonard B. Schloss, recognized as one of the foremost amusement park directors in the United States, the management of Glen Echo Park has made a wise decision.

With regard to the touring "name" band policy of presenting changes of dance orchestras in the amusement center's Spanish Garden Ballroom every two weeks, a poll of a large number of dance patrons has disclosed that fewer "special entertainers" and more legitimate dance music would be appreciated.

Mr. Schloss states the case clearly when he says:

"We are operating a ballroom with good music amid fine surroundings. A ballroom is for dancing, not 'floor shows' on the orchestra platform to take up the time of patrons who come out to dance.

"The Earle and Capitol theaters are the stage presentation places in Washington and people go to them for their stage shows and pictures. Howard Becker and his band, appearing for us this week, and Herbie Holmes and his modern music, coming next week, are typical dance bands, which, by reason of their omission of too much 'entertainment' have gone over big with their rendition of popular dance numbers with novel orchestrations in proper tempo.

"Catering to the masses, Glen Echo, in the future, will eliminate some of the heretofore too frequent 'specialty' numbers and make its motto, 'on with the dance.'"

To one whose dancing isn't what it used to be—in case it ever was—what with the spavined ankles, floating knees, rickety hips and an occasional return of the old bubonic plague, that still sounds like an eminently sane edict. When you gotta dance, you gotta dance!

Repeated reference to "Storm in a Teacup," now in its third week at the Little Theater, as "the best film comedy to come from England since 'The Ghost Goes West,'" has resulted in many requests to the management of the Ninth street theater for a revival of the earlier release. Arrangements now have been made, says the joint voice of Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller and Abe Tolkins, to bring this about at an early date. In the meantime, there is that twice deferred revival of "Top Hat," with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, to fret about.

Further evidence that this will prove an extremely active summer for lovers of screen entertainment comes from Divisional Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, In., who supplements an earlier list of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists and Paramount productions, slated for his Washington houses, with an interesting line-up of Twentieth Century-Fox releases which also will be seen on loewcal Loew screens.

Heading this "star-spangled array" is "Alexander's Ragtime Band," the cavalcade of Americah music that is more than a little in the nature of an Irving Berlin autobiography. Alice Faye, Tyrone Power and Don Ameche are the stars—just as they were in "In Old Chicago." The supporting cast is "all-star" if ever there was such a thing.

Then, as already made known here, will come Shirley Temple's latest contribution to the world's gayety, "Little Miss Broadway," scheduled to follow "Shopworn Angel," at the Palace.

Warner Baxter, Marjorie Weaver, Peter Lorre and Jean Hersholt soon will be seen in "I'll Give a Million," and coming right along also is "Always Goodbye," with Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall.

Other Twentieth Century-Fox items that are either ready for release or in production include the Ritz Brothers in "Straight, Place and Show," "Splinter Fleet," Sonja Henie in "My Lucky Star" and Loretta Young, Tyrone Power and many others in "Suez," one of Darryl Zanuck's costliest and most pretentious undertakings—and that is very costly and very pretentious, indeed!

Airplane Used to Stampede Cattle

By using airplanes to chase cattle, Hollywood has discovered a new way of keeping locations clear for movie work.

John Howard, Heather Angel, H. B. Warner, and other members of the troupe making "Bulldog Drummond in Africa," were threatened with delay while working in a desert canyon 100 miles from Hollywood. Two herds of cattle kept moving into camera range.

Director Louis King solved the problem by instructing two aviators, employed in the film, to fly low over the herds. The method proved effective. The cattle stampeded out of the canyon.

Mess of Taffy Creates Major Film Problem

Actor-Candy Pullers Are Shown Up by 'Scab' Professional.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, July 11.—When you see "Paris Honeymoon" at your movie theater this fall, you'll probably get a chuckle from a brief but hilarious scene wherein Comedian Ben Blue tangles with a couple of Bulgarian taffy pullers.

If you don't, Producer Harlan Thompson, Director Frank Tuttle and numerous supernumeraries will have staged one of the most exasperating series of taffy pulls in the history of that sport—because how can you have Bulgarian taffy pullers pulling taffy unless they have some taffy to pull? That was the problem. Here's how it was solved:

At 1 p. m. today Paramount's standby plumber hauled a gas stove onto stage nine. He also brought along a bottle of compressed gas. A professional candy-maker named Joe, from a downtown factory, was on hand with his copper kettle, his glucose, his sugar and his assistant.

Joe couldn't understand why he couldn't cook his taffy on the range in the studio commissary across the street, but the plumber said orders were orders. Joe sent his assistant out for a glass of milk while he waited. Producer Thompson and Director Tuttle explained that three professional taffy pullers, who also were members of the screen actors' guild, were en route to try out for the taffy pulling job.

Rubber Wouldn't Do.

Messrs. Thompson and Tuttle said they had considered imitation taffy, of rubber, but had decided that the real thing would photograph best. That explained Joe's presence.

By then the kettle was boiling. In another minute the fire went out. So did the plumber. Thirty minutes later he returned with a new stove. Joe woke up and started stirring. He said he guessed he was the only taffy maker left in Southern California. Machinery does the job these days, he added.

About that time the three actors, who also were taffy pullers, showed up. They identified themselves as Joe Garcia, Olin Francis and Jerry Sheldon. They all had mustaches, confidence in their ability as taffy pullers, and a desire to have the studio photographers take their pictures for publicity purposes.

Mr. Garcia called the Screen Actors' Guild for permission. The guild said "no"—no pictures until and if Paramount put the taffy pullers on the pay roll.

Thompson tasted the taffy; he said it would have been better had it been vanilla. Tuttle said he wanted to see the taffy pullers pull.

Mr. Garcia tried first. He pulled and he pulled, but his taffy stayed mostly in lumps. Mr. Francis tried his hand. He did no better; in fact he dropped his chunk of taffy on the floor. Mr. Sheldon also took a whack at it. Whack was right; he nearly pasted Director Tuttle in the face with a rope of the stuff.

A Puller Without a "Pull."

Joe was biting his fingernails. Finally he could resist no longer. He said he'd like to show the folks how taffy really should be pulled. Thompson shrugged his shoulders and Joe went to work with all the wizardry and the artistry of a professional taffy puller, tried and true. He made figure eights with his taffy. He sent it in loops and undulating waves.

"Beautiful," breathed Thompson. "Superb," agreed Tuttle.

Then, Joe asked, how were the chances to hire him not only as a taffy cooker, but also as a taffy puller? Thompson regretfully replied that union rules forbade the use of nonprofessional movie performers so long as there were any guild members who could do the work, namely, taffy pulling. And there were dozens, scores, yes, hundreds of guildsmen who claimed they were taffy pullers.

There'll be more taffy pulling at Paramount—much more—before the Bulgarian taffy pullers perform before the camera.

Tuttle didn't say anything. The proceedings had left him speechless. As for Joe, he mournfully tossed his 25 pounds of taffy into the waste-can and announced he'd be on hand tomorrow to make another batch.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 11.—In spite of Merle Oberon's trouble with taxes, she now has fame and friends. Much more than she had when she arrived in England a few years ago—an exotic beauty from Calcutta, India, without any prospects. She made some friends on the boat, who persuaded her to do a little modeling, for she'd get her picture in the papers that way. She did. Then joined "The Cats," Calcutta's Amateur Society, in London. Later she was a hostess in the Cafe de Paree.

HEDDA HOPPER

With her appearance, it was only a step to extra work. While lunching one day at Elstree Studio, Maria Korda saw her, picked her out, and brought her to the attention of Alexander Korda. She played a minor part before she got Anne Boleyn in "Henry VIII." From that time on it was blue skies, full sailing ahead.

"Henry VIII" brought to fame Charles Laughton, Robert Donat, Merle Oberon, Binnie Barnes, Wendy Barrie and Benita Hume—what a lineup!

The story goes that producers were disappointed in it—were willing to sell half an interest for $25,000. It's made millions and still going strong in odd corners of the globe.

Then followed for Merle "Life of Don Juan" with young Fairbanks. That, to me, was the most exotic thing she's ever done.. Dressed in laces, veils and spangles—as mysterious as the Mona Lisa. You wondered where a girl like that ever came from.

She was costarred with Leslie Howard in "The Scarlet Pimpernel." Leslie took a personal interest and taught her a great deal about acting.

During this time, Sam Goldwyn bought half her contract so that now she makes two pictures here and two abroad. "Follies Bergere," her first picture for Sam, wasn't very successful. She was such a contradiction. On the screen, her eyes had that Oriental slant. But in real life, wearing jodhpurs and a sweater, her hair in a careless lang bob, she looked like any fun-loving girl, full of the old nick and after a good time.

But when she went to parties, she still dressed her type and played her part. It was at a Mayfair party where her friendship with Norma Shearer started. Merle wasn't having a good time and was about ready to go home, when she caught her heel in the lace of her dress and fell flat on the dance floor. On looking up she caught Norma Shearer's eye, who smiled understandingly and their friendship was born. Her two best friends are Norma's children. On the nurse's day off she used to go down and take care of them. On location at the Uplifter's Club, Irving Junior spent a whole day with her.

She loves to fish, and if lucky, always sends one to little Irving. He decided, the other day, to do something for her. She's working, so he went fishing—but had no luck. But he did have some money in his pocket, so he bought a fish. Junior then went home, found a large candy box, put his prize inside, which by that time had become a little fragrant. So he took his mother's best perfume and sprinkled it over the top of the box. Then with his nurse he called at the studio and presented it to Merle. But even little Irving got the fact that the fish dominated the perfume and he suggested she'd better not eat it. So together they buried it.

People at the studio adore her. If you said anything against her they'd sock you.

After being in England sixteen months, she came back loaded down with individual presents for everyone. I can hear you say: "Yes, that's good business—why shouldn't she?" No reason, except very few do.

Merle saves her battling for the big boys. She had one with David Selznick over the "Garden of Allah." She brought suit and settled out of court for $6,000.

Only in Hollywood can you have a bitter court battle one minute and be great friends the next. She's just spent the week-end as the guest of the Selznicks on their yacht.

Her engagements of the heart come suddenly, vanish as quickly. Take the first one with Joe Schenck. He gave her an enormous diamond ring. When romance ended, he took it back and sold it to Doug Fairbanks, sr. One of Merle's best friends, Sylvia Fairbanks, now wears it.

Her longest engagement was to David Niven. Hollywood didn't believe he'd come back to play the "Lady and the Cowboy" with her. But he's here—doing it.

The Brian Aherne romance never reached engagement point. Now, all eyes are on George Brent.

At a party one night, she couldn't wait to have her palm read privately by one of the guests, who was good at it. Merle said: "Go ahead." She did—and said: "You'd like people to think the opposite, but your head has and always will rule your heart. Nothing will ever stop you."

She lives in Norma Talmadge's house in Santa Monica. Gets up at 6:30, goes into the ocean with her two hardy British maids. And drinks gallons of liquid, made from berries, fruits, vegetables. Has her own liquefier.

Glen Echo Park

Howard Becker and his swell Keystone State band began another week's engagement in the Spanish Garden Ballroom at Glen Echo Park last night, with a "full house" to applaud their efforts. The ballroom was typical of all parts of the big resort over the week-end. Hot weather makes Glen Echo the mecca for those in all walks of life and the crowds at the big Crystal Pool were certainly getting their money's worth.

Other attractions that made the heat only something you read about in the papers were the "world cruise," with its underground boats in a cave-like temperature; the fast dodgem rides, with new, zippy, streamlined cars; the ultra-modern speed boats on the waterway canal and last, but not least, those veterans of the park, the coaster dip, whip, pretzel, aeroplane swing, midway and smaller attractions.

A large number of families decided Glen Echo's picnic grounds were the No. 1 attraction and took their ease where they could watch the fun.

Frank Moore Wins Medal With 136 in P. G. A. Play

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

We think it is entirely meet and proper that the National Boxing Association has ranked Mr. Anthony Galento, of Newark, as the No. 1 contender for Joe Louis' heavyweight championship. There has been a disposition among the fight-writing gentry to emit a series of derisive humps and look down their noses at the high rating conferred on Mr. Galento, whom they regard strictly as a fistic freak and no fit person to mingle with the pugilistic elite. But it seems that fistic society isn't what it used to be.

POVICH.

With the exception of Joe Louis, who is destined to go down in history as one of the better world champions, the heavyweight division is inhabited by very cheap company. And in that company Fatty Galento, despite his unique training methods and his grotesque appearance in the ring, easily qualifies as tops.

• • • •

There is nothing stylish about Galento. He fights with but one idea in mind—to belt the other guy out as soon as possible. The gentlemanly art of self-defense has no part in the fighting scheme of Two-Ton Tony. He owns an iron chin that is far more precious than all the hints in boxing's defense manual. And he owns a left hook that is dynamite.

If Galento isn't the most acceptable No. 1 challenger for Louis' title then who, we inquire, is? Certainly not Max Baer, whom the N. B. A. rated third on the heavyweight list. The memory of Baer cowering on one knee and taking the full count against Joe Louis is still too vivid to permit him precedence over Galento. And certainly not Tommy Farr who has a batting average of .000 in this country, including a defeat by Baer.

• • • •

It couldn't be Max Schmeling, who, we seem to recall, was belted out in 2 minutes and 4 seconds by Louis last month. And the rest of the current heavy weights—Bob Pastor, Gunnar Barlund, Red Burman, Nathan Mann, Johnny Adamick, Al McCoy—are a sad commentary on the present state of the heavyweight division.

Two-Ton Tony is a freshing sort of fellow, too. He cheerfully admits that he trains on beer and long black cigars and that his prize fighting is something of a sideline to his tavern business. "All I have to do is take off my apron to lick those bums," Galento is know to have said when other heavyweights were mentioned. And thus far, he has been eminently correct.

• • • •

Right now he's probably the most valuable piece of property in the heavyweight division aside from Louis. Fight fans who were disposed to laugh at the training antics of Galento have been forced to take seriously the pudgy barkeep who goes merrily on his way knocking out everybody thrown into the ring with him. The Galento left hook is getting famous.

He has some notable precedents in the matter of failing to adhere to the orthodox training routine. John L. Sullivan managed pretty well despite his weakness for the cup that cheers, and they do say that Grover Cleveland Alexander had not yet recovered from an all-night binge the day he struck out Tony Lazzeri with the bases full in the 1926 World Series. And Eleanor Holm was setting backstroke records while confessing her weakness for champagne. Walter Hagen, winner of more titles than any other golfer, was never a teetotaler.

• • • •

In a hundred fights, Galento has never been knocked cold. Once, three years ago, at Griffith Stadium, he suffered a technical kayo at the hands of Marty Gallagher, but that was an accident. Galento went into that fight with a badly damaged eye and was winning on points from here to there when the eye began to bleed so profusely in the twelfth round that doctors forced him to quit.

Joe Louis has drawn the color line, refusing to meet any Negro fighters, but Galento isn't so particular. On July 28, at Philadelphia, he is taking on John Henry Lewis, the light heavyweight champion, whom Joe Louis has refused to fight. Two-Ton Tony will be pitted against one of the cleverest boxers in the business when he climbs into the ring against Lewis, but he'll be the favorite to win.

• • • •

Joe Jacobs stumbled into something when he took over Galento's contract. He now figures to make more money with the Newark tavern keeper than he did as manager of Schmeling. Jacobs was virtually frozen out of Schmeling's earnings in recent years. Instead of the manager's customary 33 1-3 per cent of his fighter's earnings, Jacobs drew only 10 per cent of Schmeling's. But he is in for a full third of Galento's purses.

Galento's possibilities were mulled by such astute fight men as Jack Dempsey and Jimmy Erwin. Dempsey, with a great fanfare, announced several years ago that Galento was the best prospect in the heavyweight division and that he had taken over his management. But he lost his enthusiasm for Two-Ton Tony in the rush of his restaurant business and turned him adrift.

Galento was Erwin's for the taking after that and he did fight under Erwin's management for a brief while. But Erwin, too, lost interest in Two-Ton Tony and Galento was managerless when Joe Jacobs took him over. If he gets by Lewis, Galento is destined for the really big money in the heavyweight division.

4 Pros From Capital Area Qualify for Event

Mamaroneck Golfer Has 2 Rounds of 68; Ties Modern Record.

Cox, Walper, Gibson and Ball to Face Greats of Game Today.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A Staff Correspondent.

Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., July 11.—Tying a 9-year-old P. G. A. qualifying mark with his second sub-par 68 in as many days, Frank Moore, 29-year-old Mamaroneck, N. Y., golfer, reformed ball player and brother of Terry Moore, of the St. Louis Cardinals, won the Alex Smith Trophy and a diamond medal here today at Shawnee Country Club with his medal-winning 136 total.

Moore, who stands fifteenth among the leading money winners, his best year on the circuit, held a two-stroke margin at the end of the medal play rounds in the P. G. A. championship over Marvin Stahl, four-time winner of the Western Michigan Open, from Lansing, and Harry Nettleblatt, Framington, Mass., dark horse, who tied with 138s.

The entire field also tied a low scoring mark, as 151 or better was required to qualify for the match-play rounds, four playing off for seven places at that figure. The major casualties were few, with Neil Christian, Clarence Doser, Vincent Eldred, Mortie Dutra and Walter Kozak the only "name" players that missed qualifying.

D. C. Golfers Qualify.

Led by Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range mentor, and Wiffy Cox, Congressional, the Middle Atlantic delegation's four players all won places in the match-play rounds, although Ernie Ball was forced into a play-off before his was assured.

Walper tacked a 2-under-par 33 on the back nine to an outgoing 37 for a 70 and a 145 total for the two days, while Cox was two strokes back as he added a 73 to a previous 74 for a 147 figure. Andy Gibson, Bonnie View Club of Baltimore, was in by a single stroke as he matched his opening 75, while Ball clipped a stroke from his opening 76 to score 151.

Moore snared four birdies and an eagle on the third hole, where he chipped in the cup from out of a trap, in his 68 round that left him eight under par for the 36 holes. His nines were 34—34. Stahl, an early finisher, apparently was medalist as he finished with three consecutive birdies, 2—4—2, for a 31 and 138 total. He was later beaten by Moore and tied by Nettleblatt, who tacked a 34—33—67, three under on each nine, to a Sunday 71.

Byron Nelson, Reading pro, had one of the several 68s of today and totaled 140 for the two rounds, a score matched by lanky Ray Mangrum, Oakmont, Pa., and handsome Henry Picard, the latter with 69—71.

Cooper Loses Touch.

Harry Cooper, yesterday's leader, went four over par on the first 16 holes, eagled the seventeenth and (Morning round starts at 7:30 o'clock (E. S. T.), with matches at five-minute intervals; afternoon round at 12 noon (E. S. T.), with matches also at five-minute intervals.)

Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, July 11.—Gene Sarazen, Frank Moore, Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta—that's the opposition faced by the Washington and Middle Atlantic section representatives tomorrow in the first round of match play in the P. G. A championship.

SARAZEN.

Virtually the worst possible break they could have received in the draw makes the District, Maryland and Virginia players—Wiffy Cox from Congressional, Leo Walper, unattached, Andy Gibson, Bonnie View, and Erric Ball, Charlottesville—all decided underdogs in first round encounters.

Walper, whose 145 total led the four players, meets Gene Sarazen, Wiffy Cox, who qualified easily with 147, faces Johnny Revolta, Erric Ball, in by the grace of a playoff, will draw considerable attention as he attempts to stop the "hot" man, Medalist Frank Moore, while Walper will meet the gentleman farmer Sarazen, who is playing fine golf and has considerable backing for the title.

Walper Shoots 70.

A back nine of 33 dotted with three birdies, and a par of 37 gave Walper a 70, oneof the many sub-par rounds of the day and a berth by six strokes in the match play. His total was 145.

Cox parred the first nine holes, caught a birdie on the tenth, was par again through sixteen but on the eeventeenth trapped his second, was over in four and wound up with a seven. He was par on the final hole for a 73 and 147 total.

Gibson played his second consecutive consistent round of 75, from nines of 38 and 37, to gain a place in his first national championship. He went two over par on the last three holes to almost miss out.

Ball had the strangest incident of the event to marr his round and it nearly cost him a berth and the accompanying $100

Blasts Worry Players.

Par through the eleventh hole, Errie was on his downswing on the twelfth tee, a short hole, when a blast of dynamiteo n the Pocono Mountain Range across the Delaware River, where they were blasting, vibrated the course and Errie almost missed his shot, getting in trouble and finally wound up with a seven. Several blasts throughout the day disturbed the players with the terrific din and shock, but Ball was the only one that lost four strokes.

The feat of the two Washington and four Middle Atlantic players qualifying is unexcelled in District golf history, and it is one of the few associations in the tournament that found all of its men batting a thousand for the medal rounds.

Other first-round features include last year's finalist, Jug McSpaden, against Sam Parks, who is six strokes under his usual 75 average, Ed Dudley opposing Johnny Farrell, Harry Cooper against Felix Serafin and Willie Klein vs. Billy Burke.

Bucs Rally In 9th to Nip Cubs, 5 to 3

Increase Winning Streak to 12 Straight; Trail Giants 1½ Games.

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 11.—The fast-stepping Pittsburgh Pirates extended their winning streak to 12 consecutive games, a new high in the major leagues this season, and advanced within a game and a half of the New York Giants today as they came from behind to whip the Chicago Cubs 5-3. The Giants held the previous 1938 record of eleven straight.

Trailing 2 to 3 going into the ninth inning, the Pirates jumped on Larry French for three runs to give Jim Tobin his sixth victory of the year, but not until Mace Brown, the old reliable relief hurler, had been called in to stop a budding Cubs' rally in the last half of the frame. Tobin was sent to the rescue of Bill Swift after the Cubs had put over two runs to take the lead in the eighth.

Lee Handley and Johnny Rizzo led the eleven-hit attack with two doubles each off French while the three Pittsburgh hurlers were holding the Cubs to eight scattered blows. Rizzo opened the Pirates' winning drive with his second two-bagger. Arky Vaughan walked and the bases were filled when Ray Berres beat out a single.

A force-out sent Rizzo across the plate with the tying run. Then Tobin personally accounted for the winning margin by scoring the final two counters with a single. Tobin was taken out of the box in the ninth, however, after Frank Demaree had led off with an infield single. Brown got Pinch-hitter Jim Collins on a fly and forced Tony Lazzeri, another pinch-hitter, to hit into a double play.

Berres got into the game in the seventh when Catcher Al Todd was chased from the game along with Coach Jewell Ens for disputing a decision on Rizzo at the plate.

Loop-Leading Tribe Is Nats' Foe Today

Ken Chase Will Be Sent to Mound Against Indians; Invaders Are Hot, Holding First Place

By Shirley Povich.

The Nats move into faster company today. Boasting a four-game winning streak achieved at the expense of the seventh-place Philadelphia Athletics, the Nats meet up with the league-lading Cleveland Indians this afternoon.

Two games in front of the second-place Yankees, Oscar Vitt's revitalized Indians are confounding the critics by hanging onto the lead. Not in recent years has a Cleveland club occupied the lead at this stage of the proceedings. Vitt's team has shown no indications of hitting its annual midsummer slump.

When the Yankees moved into a tie with the Indians for the lead last week, the collapse of the Cleveland club was foreseen, but it failed to develop. During the last three playing days, the Indians stepped out in front again by winning three games from the Browns while the Yankees were dropping two at Boston.

Vitt's club has sharpened itself for the Griffith Stadium invasion with three one-run victories over the Browns at Cleveland, two of the games requiring extra innings.

Chase Sees Action.

The appearance of the Indians against the Nats is the sign for young Kendall Chase to return to action as a starting pitcher for Bucky Harris. The left-handed Chase, now acquiring a reputation as a "spot" pitcher, always starts against the Indians, who are top-heavy with left-handed hitters, notably Earl Averill and Hal Trosky.

Harris has Harry Kelley, author of a shutout performance in his last start, available for today's game, but he prefers to risk Chase, who on occasion has been notably effective against Vitt's team.

Unless Cleveland starts a southpaw, and that is doubtful, Zeke Bonura will continue to warm the bench for the Nats. Young Jimmy Wasdell slugged himself high in favor with Harris on Sunday with his four-run home run.

Don't Believe Story.

Both Harris and Griffith yesterday minimized the reported demands of Bonura that he be played regularly or traded.

"We have heard cases like that before," said Griffith. "But they always come around to my way of thinking. Some ball players are too easily discouraged. Frankly, I don't believe that Bonura made any such demands. Nobody has ever showed a finer spirit on the club than Zeke.

"I haven't lost faith in Bonura. One of these days he's going to start hitting like we know he can hit. That hit he made in the ninth inning Sunday to drive across the tying and winning runs may be the hit that ended his slump. He'd be a great help to us."

What About Wasdell?

Griffith neglected to state what would be the lot of Jimmy Wasdell if Bonura emerged from his slump. Wasdell's defensive skill and his timely hits have bolstered the Nats immensely.

Manager Harris, however, is still committed to a policy of using Wasdell against right-handed pitching and Bonura against southpaws. Which means that Wasdell will see the most action, inasmuch as southpaw pitchers are fewer and managers no longer are eager to send them against the Washington club, which can present a strong array of right-handed hitters.

World Marlin Record Is Broken.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Ocean City, Md., July 11.—World's record white marlin catch was made today off Cruiser Sea Gull by Capt. Lee and Rick Savage. Eight were caught in eight hours, beating Jack and Paul Townsend's 1936 record of seven fish.

W. S. Plowman, C. E. Wentz, James Irving, Hanover; Frank Ale, Lancaster, each caught two, averaging 7 feet 6 inches and weighing between 60 and 80 pounds. Ships entering harbor flying marlin flags drew huge crowd to congratulate record-breakers.

Wyatt Is Bought By the Dodgers

Milwaukee, July 11 (AP).—Sale of Whitlow Wyatt, leading pitcher of the Milwaukee Brewers, to the Brooklyn Dodgers, to report next spring, was announced today by President Henry Bendinger, of the Milwaukee club.

Bendinger said the Brewers would receive two players outright, one of them Pitcher Buck Marrow, and two others on option next season.

Wyatt, who has won 12 games, including 6 shutouts, and lost 6 this season, came to the Brewers last winter from Cleveland in the deal that sent Ken Keltner to the Indians. Wyatt previously had trials with the Detroit and Chicago American League clubs.

Reds Wallop Cards, 9 to 5

Score 8 Runs in First Inning and Coast In

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 11.—The Cincinnati Reds cut loose with all their power in the first inning today, grabbed eight runs on as many hits and then coasted to a 9-to-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Pint-sized Roy Henshaw had "plenty of nuthin'" on the ball when he stepped to the mound. Lead-off man Linus Frey singled and the Reds were off.

Berger followed with a double. Ival Goodman missed the cue and flied out, but Frank McCormick singled in the first runs. Lombardi followed with another sharp single but Craft popped out. McCormick scored on Riggs' safe blow and Lombardi romped over when Slaughter made a bad throw for the plate. Riggs took second.

Billy Myers then sent a home run into the leftfield bleachers. At this point Ray Harrell replaced Henshaw but it didn't make much difference.

Night Baseball Will Boom Next Year

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, July 11.—Despite bitter opposition from some irreconcilables, including both New York clubs, night baseball will flourish in at least four major league cities by 1939 . . . Philadelphia and St. Louis will be added to the current list, comprising Cincinnati and Brooklyn.

GOULD.

"It's not baseball — it's freak stuff," cry opponents of lights, but the box-office payoff is the answer . . . Night baseball has been the salvation of many minor leagues, including American Association and International League . . . It will keep some major league clubs from folding up in next few years . . . But so long as Col. Will Terry has anything to say about it, his Giants never will perform under the lights . . .

• • • •

Newark's domination of the International League again is all the more noteworthy because eight members of the 1937 club, which have won the penant by 25½ games, have been graduated to majors . . . Besides quartet now with New York Yankees (Gordon, Beggs, Sundra and Dahlgren), there's Seeds, bought for $25,000 cash by Giants; McQuinn, first sacker of St. Louis Browns; Vito Tamulis, southpaw with Dodgers, and Hershberger, No. 2 backstop of Cincinnati Reds . . . But for play-off system, inaugurated by President Frank Shaughnessy, International wouldn't have much chance to keep interest alive in last half of pennant season . . . up to today Newark's lead was 11½ games . . .

• • • •

"The lives of at least 50 ball players have been saved by quick remittances for emergency operations and necessities . . . The grants range from $50 to $10,000," writes H. G. Salsinger, of Detroit News, commenting on uses of funds (including all-star game net proceeds) handled by National Ball Players Association . . . Membership dues are $10 in majors, $5 in minors . . .

"But not all players belong," adds Salsinger. "Several members of the Detroit team refuse to contribute $10 to help their professional brethren who are down on their luck . . . Every member of the Cincinnati team belongs and the salary list of the Cincinnati team is far below that of Detroit . . . There are two major league managers who refuse to contribute . . . Bill Terry and Burleigh Grimes" . . .

• • • •

Glenn Cunningham, who has spurned all pro offers, will try at least one more season of footracing . . . He's already agreed to run in the 1939 Sugar Bowl track meet at New Orleans, against Chuck Fenske, Archie San Romani, Louis Zamperini and Blaine Rideout . . .

Sicilia Bows To Paul Lee In 8 Rounds

'Tennessee' Suffers Bad Eye Cut But Comes Back to Win.

Hall Beats Saugsted on Technical Knockout; Bacala Victor.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Retrieving yards of lost prestige in the closing rounds with a furious two-fisted assault, slick-haired Joey Archibald, of Providence, scored an unanimous decision over the veteran Mike Belloise, of New York, in a ten-round engagement last night at Griffith Stadium.

Some 3,500 fans saw Belloise go out in front in the early rounds with an exhibition of clever boxing and fairly stiff punching, only to lose when his "possum-playing opponet struck back with his savage pawing in the late rounds. It was an interesting fight to watch, and in doubt until the final bell.

Turning point of the argument was the seventh round when Archibald, behind on points, bleeding from a slit eyelid, and apparently hopelessly outclassed, opened up with an unrelenting barrage of leather to the head that sent Belloise reeling back and started him down the path to defeat. Archibald looked his role of Tiger in this session.

On The Post score sheet Archibald had five rounds, Belloise three, and two were even. The third and tenth, crammed with action, were draws.

Belloise staggered his smiling opponent with three lightning lefts to the body and a rib-bending right to the same sector in the sixth round. Archibold gave ground and Belloise was on him like a cat, trying to finda vulnerable spot in his defense. Archibald shook off the sleepy effects of his blows, however, and they slugged it out at a furious pace along the ropes.

Paul Lee Wins.

Paul (Tennessee) Lee (125¼), formerly of Chicago and now of this city, survived a nasty cut over the right eye in the second round of his eight-round fuss with Armada Sicilia (127), Chicago, and came on to win a unanimous decision. Lee made a good impression with the audience.

It was one of those everything-goes affairs, no quarter asked and none given, with both men on the floor frequently and sometimes out of the ring. Sicilia aroused Lee's ire by banging him over the right eye and cutting it with a hard left hook early in the second round, and from then on Mr. Lee was a young bull in action.

Once he half shoved, half drove Sicilia through the ropes in a wild melee, and another time both went down and out of the ring together. Lee bled like a slaughtered beef throughout the mad scramble, but the cut was not serious enough to warrant a halt.

They shoved and tugged, butted and heeled, swung both hands freely in their determination to inflict mortal wound on one another. They took everything the other had to offer, ploughing in again and again for more.

Hall Kayoes Saugsted.

Baby Face Joy Hall (122½), of New York, lived up to his role of killer by scoring a technical knockout over Eddie Saugsted (123½), of Washington, in one minute of the second round. It was Saugsted's professional debut.

Hall, a short, squatty youngster at a decided disadvantage in reach, remained beyond reach of Saugsted's long, snaky left in the first, moving in with a looping right to the head that softened up the District lad's left eye in the first round.

In the second he walked out, ducked under a couple of left jabs and dumped Saugsted with a pulverizing right to the jaw. Eddie was in bad condition, wild-eyed and almost gone, but he struggled to his feet. He jabbed and tried to keep Hall at long range, but Baby Face moved in with both hands pumping leather to all sections of the anatomy, trying for the kill.

He exploded another potent right over Saugsted's eye, splitting it wide open. Saugsted was reeling and groggy, bleeding profusely, and Referee Harry Volkman wisely stopped the bout and called Dr. Gilly Ottenberg into the ring. The doctor ordered the bout stopped.

They unveiled a prospective Henry Armstrong in young Billy Banks (123), Washington, colored featherweight, who scored a unanimous decision over Buster Brown (118½), of Baltimore. Banks lived up to all advance notices with some clever boxing and straight, stiff punching, but paced himself incorrectly and tired badly in the last round.

The veteran Sam Bacala (141), of Baltimore, scored a comparatively easy victory over Young Palmer (134), of Washington. The decision was unanimous.

4 Seeded Players Take Net Matches

New York, July — (AP).—Four seeded players were able to play their matches today in the New York State clap court tennis championships despite rain and darkness which forced postponement of many matches.

Don McNeill, Oklahoma City, seeded No. 1 was extended to three sets to turn back the threat of Carlton Rood, New York, 5—7, 6—0, 6—1.

Morey Lewis, of Texarkana, Ark., seeded No. 6, outsted Jack Mahoney, of New York, 6—1, 6—1.

Gerard Podesta, captain-elect of the Princeton tennis team, and seeded No. 5, defeated Eddie de Gray, New York, 6—3, 6—2. The other favorite to play today was Leonard Hartman, New York, seeded No. 4, who eliminated another New Yorker, Ken Oliver, 6—1, 6—4.

Bester Memorial Purse Tops Program as Hagerstown Opens Today

Outdoors

When you go fishing, remember here is a crying need for more protective measures on several of our finest sport fishes — until they get this protection, do your part by taking only what you can use.

Remember that conservation of our wild life is not a one-man job. Help your conservation officers by obtaining your fishing licenses before you go astream, for your license dollar will buy far more of a stocking if a great part of it isn't used to apprehend violators of the restrictive regulations of the various States where you pursue your sport.

ACKERMAN.

Join a sportsman's organization. In this section, that means some one of the many Ike Walton chapters, and if you have any idea they are "conservationists at any price," forget that right now. They are sportsmen first, which is what it takes to make a "good" conservationist, and not "purists," who toy with the idea for a hobby—who believe that no living thing should be killed—who don't know there is such a thing as over-stocking, and if sportsmen fail to take the surplus, nature will.

Today lets turn the spotlight on the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Chapter—a liveone, counted any way you like, with more than a hundred members. Members that say little, but do their part in stocking your favorite trout streams, and at this time of the year are buying and raising birds to release for your sport this fall.

Native Bobwrite quail, Mexican quail, ringneck pheasants, mutants, and the newly imported chukars—we saw each and every kind one afternoon this week on a trip of exploration with Laddie Clark.

Charlie Crockett, with one hen off with Bobwhite, and another on 23 ringneck eggs—his Mexicans were wild and hadn't started to lay. Henry Wagner with a setting of 23 mutant eggs due to hatch the next day. "Big Train" Walter Johnson with hens on 80 mutant eggs. Al Walker with every one of his chukars and Bobwhite hens laying, one of the latter with a record of more than a hundred straight, and chicks from a day-old through every stage up to those about ready to be released.

The greatest kick came from Joe Perna's buff bantam, that only the day before had hatched out of 27 eggs 27 Bobwhite chicks. Chicks that were already keeping their proxy mother more than busy, and looked, for all the world, like a flock of bumble bees. Another hen on 27 eggs, that, when she saw the hatch, left her own eggs to help mother a few of the "bumble bees."

All these birds will be released in sections where farmers and landowners are co-operating by plantings and a rotation of crops that will make their liklihood of continued existence something more than just a chance.

The succulent Norfolk spot is with us again for another season. Hardly a place on the bay or Potomac, but what is reporting good catches of this delicately flavored table fish. Ed Bowen's boats at Solomons have been taking them for the past ten days in the Patuxent, near Town Point. Small hooks and bloodworms, with a flyrod, and they will rate with any fish in the bay.

The schools of rock have moved down to the section between Point No Point and Point Lookout, and St. Jeromes Creek boats have been hitting them up to 20 a day. Capt. Claude McKay reports them as running from 2 to 5 pounds. There continues to be more hardheads, in this section, than most anglers care to catch, with here and there a sea trout.

The great run of white marlin that started off Ocean City, Md., last Thursday, continues unabated. It is in no way out of ordinary to see as many as a dozen at one time—anglers are flocking in to the town, and the general excitement is mounting until, everyone is, in simple words, just about nuts. And can you blame them—we get all het up just taking the reports over the phone.

Dr. James C. Waters, Dr. S. W Hawkins, Dr. Warren Buck and Charles T. Given, local anglers from Columbia Hospital, were on Capt. B. L. Raymond's Lev-Lou—hooked nine and landed two—and had a strike from a huge marlin that raised up right at the skipping bait. When it pulled out it must have appeared unpalatable, for he failed to strike again.

Dr. Waters' fish measured 7 feet 9 inches and weighed 80 pounds, while Dr. Hawkins' marlin was an even 8 feet and weighed 84 pounds. At one time there were 15 fish around the baits.

During the day 21 white marlin were caught and brought in, while on Saturday the count was 10, for a grand total of 55 during the first four days of the run. A total that, nine times out of ten is as many more than they take at Montauk in a whole season.

In the four days Capt. Raymond's catch has been five, which when you count boats, is his full share, although Paul and Jack Townsend have taken as many in one day, but then Paul, and his brother Jack isn't far behind, is rated as one of the fastest big-game anglers on the Atlantic Coast.

Tackles Are Signed By Redskin Eleven

The Washington Redskins—professional football champions—announced yesterday the signing of two tackles, Roy Young and Milton Johnson. Young, a 215-pounder, was graduated from Texas A. & M. in June. Johnson, who weighs 210, comes from the University of New Hampshire. The Redskins now have eight tackles under contract.

Sprint Aces Try Track's New Course

Washoe Valley Battles Adratic and Others; 6 Other Events.

By Walter Haight.

Hagerstown, which once had a fair and a few horse races, now has a full-fledged race meeting and the fair comes later. With every stall containing a horse, or the equivalent thereof, the Hub City of Maryland is ready to offer seven races daily each week day, next Monday excepted, until July 23.

Today's opening feature race is the H. E. Bester Memorial Purse, named for the man who revived races in Hagerstown and father of the present general manager, Harold E. Bester. The race is the fifth and over the new Mason Dixon course of slightly more than 5 furlongs. Fourteen of the best sprinters on the grounds have been named, although, with an eye to better racing fields, will be limited to eight starters.

Washoe Valley Choice.

The favorite in the limit field is likely to be Washoe Valley, W. Kendrick's speed champion from Charles Town. This filly won her last four races in West Virginia and is in excellent form. She meets formidable opposition with Adriatic, Castabout, Idyllic, Dixie S. and others ready to make her step her best every inch of the way.

While only in small numbers, horses which raced at Agawam and Delaware Park have made their appearance on the first-day program. Just how they will fare on the sharper turns at Hagerstown remains to be seen.

The Jones camera has been set up to take care of the close finishes. With the exception of Belair, Hagerstown is the first of the half-milers to use the photo on the close ones.

Earl Waldron, chief assistant to Mort Mahoney, is in charge of the mutuel plant and has put on a larger crew than usual in anticipation of increased wagering. He will conduct the daily double on the first and second races.

Brennan's Book Popular.

Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan has compiled a book for the meeting which has pleased a majority of the horsemen. With its new chute, Hagerstown can offer a variety of distances and a chance for all horses to win purses. Upwards of $30,000 will be distributed to horse owners during the ten days.

Hagerstown is the first-stop of the Maryland half-mile circuit. Belair follows the Hub City meeting, with the others coming in this order: Cumberland, Marlboro and Timonium—then it will be on to Havre de Grace.

Post time throughout the meeting is 2:15 p. m.

Selections at Hagerstown.

Dear Al:

Racing begins in Maryland again after a lay-off since the close of Pimlico last May 14 and we're going to have a ten-day session here in the hilly part of the Old Line State. I'm not going to wax poetic about it, but Brother Bester and the boys seemed to have lined up a fair opening program. I've dug deep in the figure books and I'm trying my best to come up with some winners. The requests for Hagerstown badges continue to pour in and I'm doing the best I can to fill all orders although I've announced that my supply is gone with the wind—or should I say the mail. I finally got the fan mail I wanted. One of the Benningites I used to play ball with him, so I guess he's prejudiced, writes that I should be giving myself some pats on the back. "Your selections have been fine for the past week," he writes. "In fact, you've been leading the handicappers in this area. I ought to know because I've been keeping a check-up." Those were kind words, indeed. I must confess I slipped over five juicy ones last Saturday at Delaware Park. Hagerstown should have a good meeting. There is a sprinkling of Agawam and Delaware horses in the first-day entries and these will increase, I'm told, as the meeting progresses. Mixed in with the Charles Town horses, this should make for better prices and good sport. But let me warn you, this track is softer than Charles Town and many horses which got little or nothing over there will be clicking in good style here. Now for the winners.

BILL.

First race—Nancy Reed, a winner at Agawam, shapes up well in this field. She has good general odds and might win at the first asking here. Shooting Scout could get nothing at Delaware but has speed and is dangerous. Prince Jock breaks off the rail and may be better than generally rated.

Second race—Boro Poker ran encouragingly at Charles Town and should like this softer track. This one is not exactly favored by the outside post position but I'm going to string along. Running Water is another which should improve with the change of scenery. Justa Jimmie did well at the other town and is a threat.

Third race—Hi Blaze turned in a nice race over the short sprint route at Charles Town after a creditable showing at a longer route. This is not a "lead-pipe cinch," as Clocker Mike says, but one with an excellent chance. Scout Rose comes from Agawam recommended by good races. Morning Flight for the show end.

Fourth race—Ladys Favor ran so well at Delaware that I'm forced to put her on top of this group. She knows her way around the half-milers. Dark Revue won two in New England, but may be troubled with the curves the first time out. The same goes for Hi-Swing, another good performer up North

Fifth race—Washoe Valley, due to her youth, continues to get in action with light weight. She is a gun out of the gate and needs only to break and run her real race. Adriatic is as tough as they make horses. Has that good Charlestown form as a recommendation and is fit. Buckley's Pride is far down the list, but should be a dangerous factor if in action.

Sixth race—Miss Adeline was trounced by most of these over in West Virginia, but since she ran a fine second at Delaware Park. She may be the right one in this field at generous odds. Sylvia G. was nipped by Aufoin last out, but I expect the order to be reversed this time.

Seventh race—Keswick Hill ended up his stay in the other State in good style. Looks like a winner in this field. Janstar, still a maiden, packs a fine closing punch and could surprise. Good Wine for the show end.

Best bet—Washoe Valley.

Three Pro-Lady Twosomes Tie in Beaver Dam Tourney

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

Want to Bet?

New York, July 11.—The very, very fat man looked across the bridge table and made some joking remark about the baron's long, lean legs, gracefully twined about each other.

"Well, you'll never be able to sit that way as long as you live," laughed the baron.

VIDMER.

"Want to bet?" the fat man asked, becoming suddenly serious.

"Certainly. I'll bet you $500 that you'll never be able to twist your legs around each other like this."

So Hal Sims went on a diet, took off 80 pounds and a year later collected the $500. He proved then and there that he would rather win a bet than eat, but no proof was need to those who have run up against him in bridge, golf, tennis, billiards, shooting or almost any other sport you might care to name.

It isn't the money he likes to win so much; it's the mere pleasure of accepting a challenge and making good; the complete satisfaction of getting the better of an opponent. And some of his experiences are worth hearing.

• • • •

There was, for instance, another set-to he had with the baron, this time at golf. He had played the baron daily for $300, giving him nine or ten strokes a round, but after an unbroken series of defeats the baron said he wouldn't play for $300 any more; that he was going to cut the stakes to $100.

"I didn't want to lose his business," Sims smiled as he related the experience. "So I made him a proposition. A very fair proposition, I thought. I told him I would play him even and that I would use only one club. He said and thought it over for fully ten minutes. I could just see him mentally analyzing the course and what possibilities there were for a man with only one club. He didn't say a word for a long time, then finally he looked up and said:

"I'll take that proposition and I'll play you for $600."

"So I took a No. 3 iron and had an 82. The baron was about a 90 player."

• • • •

A New Game.

"What was that golf bet you had with Ely Culbertson?" someone asked.

"Oh, that was really very funny," Sims related. "A bunch of us had been playing golf all day and Ely joined us for some bridge that evening. But before the bridge started we decided to settle our golf debts and there was a great deal of money being passed back and forth. But somehow, and Ely was quite aware of it, every time somebody got paid some of his winnings drifted back to me.

"'Do you mean to say that you win money from these fellows playing golf?' he asked me on the side.

"And when I told him I sometimes did, I could see him start figuring that if a bridge player could win money playing golf, he must be missing out on something. So he asked me what I thought he should go around in the first time he played.

"'A hundred and forty?' he asked.

"Well, I said I didn't think he could do quite that well. Then he got hold of a card and asked me what all the figures meant, and I showed him that the par figures meant what each hole should be made in, and then he looked at the scores on the card, which happened to be from a pretty fair foursome. I told him those were what actually had been made.

• • • •

Half a Round.

"He thought it over for a while, and I suppose he was mentally multiplying 18 times 10, and finally he said he would bet me $1,000 that he could round it in 180 strokes. Well, I took that bet and $400 of $1,000 more that someone else bet for him. We took him out to Oakland, which is a pretty tough course for anyone who never has played before."

"And pretty tough for some of us who have been playing a long time," I interrupted.

"Well, you make it look harder than it is," Hal laughed. "Any way, Culbertson swung six times on the first tee without even hitting the ball. So we called those practice swings and started all over again. It was a cinch bet from the beginning."

"What did he wind up with?"

"Well, he was out in 146," Sims grinned. "He didn't play the last nine. All he had to do was come in one under par. It didn't seem probable."

• • • •

Some day I'm going to get Sims talking about his experiences a flier with the British Royal Flying Corps and later in the Intelligence Service during the war. Some day I'm going to get him started on his boyhood days in Alabama.

I have a hunch that Hal Sims started winning bets when he was in short pants shooting marbles, and he must have outsmarted the Germans somehow, for he was in the two most hazardous services through four years of fighting, and he's still here to tell the tales. If he only will.

151 Golfers Vie Today In Western Amateur

South Bend, Ind., July 11 (AP).—A field of 151 golfers, including champions from 10 States, will start blasting away over the Chain o' Lakes course tomorrow in the first qualifying round of the thirty-ninth annual Western amateur golf tournament.

Blistering heat and blistering golf as well were expected during the meet which will wind up Sunday.

'Dizzy' Dean Told to 'Get In and Pitch'

DIZZY DEAN.

Wrigley, Tired of Fiddling With Arm Treatments, Gets Into Action.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 11.—Dizzyz Dean—sore arm or no sore arm—was ordered today to return to duty as a starting pitcher for the Chicago Cubs.

Owner Phil K. Wrigley, tired of fiddling around with varied treatments while the team's pennant prospects burned, announced he had directed his $185,000 hurling hand to "be ready to pitch within a week."

Dean, out of action for more than two months, told his boss he was "ready to go."

Manager Charley Grimm said Dean would take the mound again within the stipulated time "if his arm is better, and I think it will be."

The decision was reached at a conference attended by Dean, Wrigley and Grimm.

Grimm reported the latest X-ray pictures of Dean's problem arm showed some improvement. He added:

"He's down to 190 pounds and in perfect physical condition. There's no reason why he can't get in there and win. He'll lob 'em over for the rest of the week and a week from today he may pitch.

"Diz might have a sore arm for two years and he won't hurt it any more."

Dean, credited with three 1938 victories, has been idle since May 4, meanwhile, the Cubs dropped to fourth place.

"We didn't need Dean during the first part of the season, but we do now," Wrigley stated, "and I'm going to put him to work. He has lots of courage and enthusiasm and he's anxious to get going.

"Dizzy will be a better pitcher with a sore arm than half the major league pitchers who have good ones."

Grimm opined Dean's arm would improve with service and predicted he would win ten more games.

Forgotten for the time being was Dean's threat to sue the St. Louis Cardinals for $250,000 on the claim that his work for them after an injury last year had impaired his ability.

The Cubs, who gave $185,000 and three players for him during the spring, aim to find out.

Voyaging Middies Triumph at Golf.

Annapolis midshipmen on their annual training cruise to European ports are demonstrating their superiority in the landlubbers' game of golf.

Rear Admiral Alfred W. Johnston, commander of the training squadron, reported to the department yesterday the midshipmen during their call at Copenhagen last week defeated a Danish team in a challenge match at the Copenhagen club, 10½ to 2½.

Rear Admiral Johnson reported Midshipman Helfrick, of Hagerstown, Md., upset the Danish amateur champion on the course where he recently won his title. The champion was not further identified.

Cunningham, Meckley Duo AmongPacers

Mrs. Peyser and Larkin, Miss Stavely-Spencer Are Others.

With a sizzling sun setting the pace, three Pro-Lady twosomes sizzled over the Beaver Dam course yesterday in 78s to tie for first prize in a pro-lady Scotch foursome tournament while two pairs tied for fourth honors. There were 22 pro-lady teams in the field.

The winning twosomes were Mrs. Betty Meckley, Indian Spring, and Frank Cunningham, Burning Tree; Mrs. T. D. Peyser and Gene Larkin, both from Woodmont, and Elsie Stavely and Cliff Spencer, of the host club.

Meckley and Cunningham and Peyser and Larkin had identical rounds of 39s out and in, but Stavely and Spencer had to climb to heroic heights to finish in the money after a disastrous 42 for the first nine holes. The pair clicked brilliantly on the incoming round with a par 36, registering birdies on the tenth, fifteenth and seventeenth holes.

The shekels for a two-way split of fourth place went into golf balls for Mrs. W. R. Stokes, of Indian Spring, and Rut Coffey, of Winchester, Va., and Mrs. E. L. Bell and Charles Betschler, of Baltimore, both teams turning in cards of 79. The Baltimore duo went out in one stroke more than Stokes and Coffey, but came in with one stroke less, 42 and 37.

Top prize in the amateur-lady competition was garnered by Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Beaver Dam, and Tom Doerer, East Potomac, with a 79, beating out a field of six. They had an outgoing 37 and incoming 32, registering a birdie 2 on the 163-yard fifth hole.

Second honors were divided between Mrs. Ora Emge and Martin F. McCarthy, both of Beaver Dam, and Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional, and Eddie Bean, Beaver Dam, with 80s. Their rounds were the same, both teams going out in 39 and coming home in 41.

Heath Winning Hit Ruled to Be Single

Chicago, July 11 (AP).—William Harridge, president of the American League, decided today Jeff Heath's ninth inning game-winning single for Cleveland against St. Louis yesterday was still a single and not a triple.

Rules explain that if a fielder stops a hit by throwing his glove at the ball, the batsman shall be credited with a three-base hit. The rules also relate that in the home half of the ninth, a batter should be credited with as many bases as he might have made under normal conditions but no more than the winning runner took.

When Beau Bell, St. Louis outfielder, threw his glove at Heath's drive in Cleveland yesterday, perplexed scorers asked aid. Harridge ruled Bell's act occurred after the run had crossed the plate, and therefore the hit was a single and not a triple.

One of the feature races will be the cruiser event for members of the Maryland Yacht Club. The Millard E. Tydings Trophy will go to the winner of the race from Baltimore.

A parade of boats will be held Friday night and a fireworks display will be given Saturday night.

Bisons Beat Orioles, 8-4

Five Homers Feature Game in Buffalo.

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, July 11.—Ollie Carnegie's home run power yanked the Buffalo Bisons out of their 5-game losing streak tonight as they defeated the Baltimore Orioles, 8 to 4, in the fifth and final game of their series. It also ended Baltimore's winning streak after six straight.

Carnegie hit his twenty-first and twenty-second circuit clouts each with a man on base, at the expense of Carl Gischer, former Bison southpaw. All the Oriole runs off Ken Ash also came on homers. Manager Bucky Crouse hit two, good for three tallies, and Greenberg the other.

Hunt Victor In Net Play

D. C. Player Defeats Baltimore Ace.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 11.—A decisive victory by Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, seeded No. 2 player, marked the opening round today of the Maryland State tennis championship.

Hunt, one of the early players in the tourney, that started late as many entrants waited for a lowering of the blistering sun, disposed of Leon Goldfarb, a Baltimorean, 6—4, 6—1.

It took him but 35 minutes to advance to the second round.

John McDiarmid, ranked eleventh nationally, and a finalist in the 1935 tourney, also showed early round good form by defeating Buddy Adair, of Washington, 6—0, 6—2.

Early victories were scored by Laird Watt and Doug Cameron, of the Canadian Davis Cup squad, Watt defeating 16-year-old Fred Messick, 6—2, 6—3, and Cameron defeating Don Kelly, former Johns Hopkins athlete, 7—5, 6—1.

Among some of the Washington golfers already pledged are Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Harvey, Mr. and Mrs. Dowdell, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Stadler, Florence Scott, Ora Emge, Florence Peters and J. T. Powell.

A large contingent of Washington youthful divot-diggers is in Baltimore today awaiting their turn to smack the elusive white pellet for fame and glory in the Maryland State 18-hole medal play junior golf tournament.

Besides prizes to the winner and runner-up, there will be lesser rewards for top scores turned in by boys between 17 and 18, 15 and 16 and under 14.

List 48 Events At Chester River.

Chestertown, Md., July 11 (AP).—Forty-eight motor and sailing events were announced today by Commodore Philip G. Wilmer for the ninth annual Chester River regatta here July 29 and 30.

Two regional inboard motor championships, in the Class C and D 210-cubic inch, and the Class E, 230-cubic inch classes, will be decided at the regatta. The American Power Boat Association is sponsoring the motor events and will recognize any new marks set.

Following custom, the first day of the regatta will be devoted entirely to sailing craft, with 22 events scheduled. The races will be for all types of boats, ranging from the tiny frost bites to the Chesapeake Bay log sailing canoes.

Twenty-six events are carded for the motor boats.

John Charles Thomas, opera singer, plans to race here again. Thomas participated last year with the inboard speedster, Miss Severn, and will race her and two others this year.

Eastport Piles Up Field, Wins Race, But Is Disqualified

Salem, N. H., July 11 (AP).—For cutting across and piling up the field at the start, Mrs. V. Wyse's Eastport was disqualified as the winner of the Lawrence Purse, mile-and-a-sixteenth feature of the opening day's program at Rockingham, and the number of E. R. Bradley's Bootless was hung up as 12,000 took in the day's sport. Bootless paid $3.06 to win and finished three lengths in front of D. J. Sullivan 3d's Giant Killer which returned $8.06 to place while finishing four lengths in front of A. C. Compton's Gerald, which returned $3.20 to show.

The foul occurred at the start when Freddy Scheih drove Eastport across the field, causing all of the horses on the inside of him to pull up. Going into the clubhouse turn, Gerald managed to recover enough to take the front and lengthened his margin going into the backstretch. Reserved off the pace, Eastport was in second place going down the back side. Eastport and Bootless moved together at the top of the stretch, the latter coming from fourth position.

Eastport and Bootless battled it out down the stretch with the former having a neck the best of it at the wire. Jockey Freddy Smith, who rode Bootless, went up into the stand and claimed a foul, which the stewards voted to allow.

finished with a 74 for a 141 total that left him in a five-way tie for eighth place with Dick Metz, Lake Forest, Ill., 70—71; Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., 70—71; Ed Dudley, Philadelphia, 72—69, and host pro Jimmy Thomson, who was 71—70.

The lone 142 was Jimmy Demaret, the heavily backed Texan who had two rounds of 71, while Jimmy Hines, Francis Gallett, Frank Walsh, John...y Revolta and Horton Smith had 143. Par of 144 was matched by nine players that included Ralph Guldahl, Open champion, who played in listless fashion for 144; Ky Laffoon, Tony Manero, Sam Parks and Butch Kreuger. Denny Shute, an automatic qualifier, did not play today.

Ball, Clarence Clark, Johnny Kinder and Clyde Usina made the grade via the playoff route with pars on the first hole, as a sudden shower, a usual playoff occurrence, sent the gallery scurrying for shelter. Al Alcroft, Charles Shepherd and Maurie O'Conner missed with bogey 5s.

Phils Trade Stainback To Dodgers for Brack

Philadelphia, July 11 (AP).—The Philadelphia National League Club today traded George T. Stainback, outfielder, to Brooklyn for Gilbert Brack, outfielder.

Stainback is one of the players the Chicago Cubs sent to St. Louis in the $185,000 deal for Dizzy Dean. He was purchased from the Cards by the Phils last May.

Public Park Net Tourney Is All Quiet

Event Runs True to Form as Favorites Win Second Round.

Play in the second round of the public parks tennis tourney ran true to form yesterday at the Rock Creek courts. Most of the matches were in the minor bracket, with the seeded players scheduled for action this afternoon, giving them one day of rest after their gruelling play Sunday.

In the women's singles yesterday, Willie O'Steen seeded No. 2, made an impressive debut in the tournament by defeating Eleanor Fishburne in the feature match of the day, 7—5, 6—2.

The longest match in the 16-year history of the Public Parks tourney was held yesterday when John Beaty finally defeated Irwin Niemeyer, 16—14, in what amounted to the most colorful item on the day's dull card.

Hazel Bishopp, University of Maryland freshman, also made her debut yesterday by easily disposing of Gertrude Buckner, 6—1, 6—4. This was Miss Buckner's first Washington tourney match.

Today Allie Ritzenberg, top-seeded men's player, will face Henry Gardner in an attempt to capture his third victory of the tournament. Gardner, in his first-round match, defeated Carl Fontannini, 6—0, 7—5. Mel Tarpley, seeded No. 2, will face Bernie Blankin.

Wheat Prices Advance With Rust Damage

One Cent Rise in Face of Increased Crop Estimates.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 11.—Notwithstanding an almost unprecedented big increase of 13,682,000 bushels in the United States visible supply total, Chicago wheat values today rose nearly a cent. The Government's July crop estimates issued after the close of trading proved to be about as expected, and were not an immediate factor.

The chief stimulus for price upturns came from reports that black rust infestation of spring crop areas, especially in Canada, was becoming worse. Heavy selling, however, coincident with enlarged movement of newly harvested domestic winter wheat served to check price gains.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ¼-¾ higher, compared with Saturday's finish, July, 71¼-71⅜; September, 72⅜-72½; corn, ⅛-⅜ up; July, 58; September, 59⅜-59¾; oats unchanged to ⅛ advance; rye varying from ½ cent decline to ¼ gain, and provisions ranging from 2 cents setback to 10 cents bulge.

Ihlder Says Slums Threaten Municipalities

One Local Area Costs $500,000 More Than It Gives in Taxes.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Declaring private enterprise has retired as a constructive force in slum and decadent areas of cities, John Ihlder, executive officer, Alley Dwelling Authority, informed members of Washington Building Congress yesterday that these sections are expanding so that in some cities they threaten municipal solvency, citing one local area which costs annually $500,000 for community services more than it returns in taxes.

In a discussion of the problem at a meeting of the congress at Lafayette Hotel, Mr. Ihlder listed as its principal factors: Decadent and slum areas which are growing; an inadequate supply of good low-cost, low-rental dwellings; a spreading out of population due to improved transit facilities supplemented slightly but increasingly by more intelligent location of centers of employment, and a diminishing rate of population growth that within a predictable future will become a decreasing population. Washington, however, is one of a very few cities going counter to this national tendency, he added.

Private enterprise, he reminded, has produced no program for dealing with this problem, and, therefore, it is necessary for government to enter the field in order to reclaim decaying areas and to assure adequate low-cost, low-rent housing. This, he predicted, will stimulate private enterprise and provide additional employment by work that otherwise would not be done. It will also give contracts, create a demand for materials; revive dead property and ease community burdens. But most important, it will provide decent dwellings in place of those that now disgrace many communities.

He called attention to existing slum conditions, to expanding blighted areas in Washington as in other cities, and recalled a prophecy made in 1930 that unless private enterprise provided required dwellings and Government regulation assured proper maintenance of existing dwellings and proper construction of new ones, Government would enter the housing field.

"Since then," he said, "Government has entered the housing field, and pioneer legislation was the alley dwelling act, drafted eight years ago under sponsorship of the National Park and Planning Commission. Now the question is not whether Government agencies shall do housing, but on what basis they shall conduct their operations so as best to serve the commen weal.

The program of the Alley Dwelling Authority, he explained, is in accordance with the need in the District of Columbia. It contemplates reclamation, or redevelopment for those uses that will serve the community, of all slum areas and assurance of an adequate supply of good low-rental housing. So far as private enterprise will do either of these things, the Alley Dwelling Authority is relieved of responsibility, but so far as it does not, the authority must.

The immediate program, he said, contains plans for reclamation of three slum squares. This will sup-

Modest Advance in Aviation Stocks Fail to Prevent Market From Slipping.

New York, July 11.—Stocks dipped to the lowest point since June 28 today, erasing Saturday's modest gains and failing to follow a brisk buying flurry in aviations which occurred at the start. Weakness in cotton and further evidence that the speculative bubble in metals had burst for the time being, as well as hot weather which kept many traders out of town, were influences tending to restrict trading and render operators for the advance more cautious.

Bonds slipped, more particularly the speculative rails. Wheat closed ¾ to ⅞ up, with the trade contending that the unprecedented rise of 13,682,000 bushels reported in the United States visible supply is in line with expectations and has been discounted. The dollar climbed again against foreign exchanges.

Aero Issues Higher.

Listed shares opened narrow and irregular with the exception of aero issues, the move in which coincided with the successful New York-to-Paris flight and publication of first-half profits by Douglas Aircraft, showing better than a 100 per cent improvement. New highs were established by Wright Aero, Curtiss-Wright A, Glenn Martin, North American aviation and Douglas, but all dropped back in the afternoon with last prices about unchanged or lower compared with Saturday's close.

Current activity of the airplane manufacturing industry, it is disclosed, results largely from military orders, the Douglas statement, for example, shows that of $26,545,652 in unfilled orders on May 31, no less than $23,746,097 represented United States Army and Navy contracts and the balance export orders.

Steels Fail to Advance.

After the first hour the market settled further. Steels put on a feeble rally after publication of the week's operating rate, which was better than Wall Street had expected, but rejoined the others on the down grade later. Closing prices were, in the majority of cases, only fractionally above the day's lows. Resistance was mainly in the form of reduced offerings, the day's turnover barely exceeding the million-share mark. The composite of the 100 leading stocks was down 0.62 point, steels and coppers recording the severest losses.

Steel common, up to 58⅛ at one time, finished at 55⅝, off 2 points and Bethlehem dropped 2¼. Inland, 57⅛; National Steel 4 and Republican ⅛. Such issues as Chrysler, General Motors, International Nickel, International Harvester, American Smelting, American Can, Telephone, Anaconda, Atchison, Delaware & Hudson, Sears-Roebuck and a number of others were off a point or more. Thinness was again in evidence in many stocks, notably preferreds, American Zinc prior preferred descending more than 5 points on small business. Case issues were weak, the common losing 2⅝ and the preferred 3 points. Deere & Co. was relatively steady in a generally weak farm implement section.

Treasury Issues Strong.

Strength in United States Treasury issues, mixed changes in the foreign group and a generally easier tone in domestic obligations marked trading in bonds on the stock exchange today. These price movements were achieved without benefit of large volume in most sections.

There were no declines in the Treasury section at the close and in some instances final prices represented new highs for the year. In other issues new highs were set during the day but prices were not fully maintained. Gains for Treasurys ranged up to 8-32.

Junior Rails Weak.

Among other domestic issues the second grade rail sector displayed the greatest weakness, although the averages for 30 bonds of all descriptions showed a decline of only 0.23. Baltimore & Ohio, Southern Railway and Missouri-Kansas-Texas issues were included among those under some pressure.

Interborough issues lost ground, although utility issues in general were relatively steady. The changes in the industrial averages were small. Among foreign issues a strong spot was noted in the bonds of German General Electric with gains of a point or more.

Steel Output Drops 4 Points To 24 Per Cent

Confusion Resulting From Change in Basing System.

Cleveland, July 11.—While some small improvement in steel buying has followed recent price reductions which accompanied the radical recasting of the industry's basing point system, appearance of more substantial business awaits elimination of the confusion attending these changes as well as better activity among important consumers, says Steel.

Affected by holiday shutdowns, the Nation's steel-making rate declined 4 points last week to 24 per cent. Largest drop was at Pittsburgh, off 8 points to 15 per cent. Other reductions included 3 points at Chicago to 24 per cent, 5 points at eastern Pennsylvania to 22, 1 point at Youngstown to 27 and 7.5 at Cleveland to 15.5.

Action of independent steel producers in setting up additional basing points at price parity with Pittsburgh, following the step by United States Steel Corporation subsidiaries in eliminating Chicago and Birmingham differentials over Pittsburgh, has complicated the situation for both buyers and sellers. The new setup, tending to localize the business of mills, has a similar effect on steel consumers, and in some cases has resulted in protest from the latter.

Dullness still grips some of the major steel consuming industries. Railroads are inactive in equipment markets, although platemakers are encouraged over the possibility of early distribution of steel for 5,550 freight cars for the Southern Railway. Faced with prospects of a reduction in long hauls of steel products as well as increased diversion of steel traffic to cheaper forms of transportation—the outgrowth of new prices—railroads are inclined to question the extent of saving to them resulting from availability of lower cost material.

Reductions in steel prices are in contrast to scrap quotations which continue upward. The steelmaking scrap composite advanced 34 cents last week, to $12.50, the third consecutive increase, bringing quotations back to the mid-April level. The iron and steel composite also was difted by higher scrap prices, moving up 4 cents to $36.29. The finished steel composite also was lifted by higher scrap prices, moving up 4 cents to $36.29. The finished steel composite was unchanged at $57.20.

London, July 11.—Stocks tended downward in a quiet market today. The industrial group generally was heavy and transatlantics closed lower after early unevenness. Glit-edged issues and mines steadied. Mixed sentiment resulted from last week's mild reaction in Wall Street.

Paris—Price movements were mixed in the bourse today, with industrials closing generally lower. Rentes finished 20 centimes up to 70 lower and Bank of France lost more than 100 francs. Suez Canal was fractionally higher at 22,500 francs and Royal Dutch declined 40 francs.

LIVERPOOL—Wheat futures ended unchenged to ⅛ higher. Opening lower on cheaper Canadian C. I. F. offers, prices rallied on rust report from the American belt and firmness at Winnipeg and Chicago this morning. Declines in Egyptian and East Indian crops depressed cotton. General liquidation, including heavy Bombay selling, met limited demand. Final prices were 4 to 8 points net lower.

We have just completed three new apartment buildings at 112, 116 and 120 19th st. se. The units consist of two rooms, kitchen, dinette, bath and porch. Every effort has been made to incorporate in them the most practical of modern features. You will marvel particularly at the modern dinette furniture which is available if desired. The rentals of $47.50 per month, we feel convinced, are the lowest in the neighborhood for comparable units.

WALLACE, YOU EITHER TURN UP THOSE HANDLEBARS, OR GET SOME STRAIGHT ONES. YOU'RE NOT GOING AROUND ALL HUMPED OVER AND GET ROUND SHOULDERED. DO YOU UNDERSTAND?
THE RAMSHORN HANDLEBARS

Bob Burns Says—

I suppose I've done as much huntin' as the next one, but since I've started studyin' the lower forms of life, I'm gettin' so I can't even kill a bug. Why, some of the wildest animals are pret near human in their actions.

The other day out at the zoo I saw a pair of wild tigers in a cage and they looked so much alike I had'ta ask the keeper which one was the male. The keeper says, "The one with his hair pulled out and his face scratched up is the male."

Students Raise Questions for U. Va. Institute

9 Undergraduates Speak; Begge Discusses Job Insurance.

Charlottesville, Va., July 11 (AP).—The University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs heard undergraduates pose some searching questions today as to the status and operation of American democracy.

John Hermansen, of the University of Pennsylvania, said "the efficiency achieved" through the "one-mindedness of the totalitarian states made it necessary to prove that "inefficient fumblings" of the democracies "are remedial, not inherent."

Asks Political Education.

Bolling Lambeth, of the University of Virginia, declared politics has become a racket cluttered with "submarginal talent" because "in American education few, if any, leaders take active interest in seeing young people prepared to handle the political affairs of American government."

Martha Trippe, of Columbia University, called for "some more definite basis of co-operation" among democracies for a peaceful mobilization for law and order in the world.

Job Insurance Too Complex.

Dr. George E. Begge, acting director of the Social Security Board, said in another Institute roundtable changes in State laws will be sought to rectify the "shortcoming" of unemployment compensation administration.

"It is too complex, too cumbersome, and likely to prove too expensive," he said.

Noting that the United States Employment Service had been incorporated into the Unemployment Compensation Administration, Dr. Begge said ". . . any system of unemployment insurance, if it does not strain every resource to fill every available job, is to that extent failing in its purpose."

China War Mentioned.

Dr. Paul Clyde, professor of history at Duke, said the United States was one of the nations to be blamed for the present conditions in the Far East. His talk was made at the opening of a conference on Far Eastern problems. The Rev. Clark V. Poling, of Schenectady, N. Y., began discussions on the place of the church "in an insecure world."

The collegians took up business and government, foreign relations, government and agriculture, and education for statesmanship in the first day of their two-day roundtable.

Alexander Heard, of the University of North Carolina, asserted "we are engaged in a race between our capacity for developing the ability to make the right choices . . . The solution lies in increasing the effectiveness of our efforts to produce intelligently operative citizens," he said.

Luciano, 5 Others Appeal Vice Case To Supreme Court

By the Associated Press

Charles (Lucky) Luciano and five others convicted two years ago of vice racketeering in New York, appealed to the Supreme Court yesterday in a final effort to escape serving long prison terms.

Luciano is serving a 50-year term at Clinton Prison, Danemora, N. Y.

The others, serving terms ranging from 10 to 25 years, are David Bettilo, Abraham Wahrman, Thomas Pennochio, James Frederico and Ralph Lugori.

They declare a New York law which permits the prosecutor to join the series of violations into one indictment was invalid as applied to them because the crimes charged were committed before enactment of the statute.

They also told the court that District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey used perjured testimony. The conviction has been affirmed by the New York Court of Appeals.

$20,000 Bail Set For 'Little Benny'

"Little Benny" Ertel, 23, arrested here several weeks ago in the slaying of a New York City policeman, yesterday was ordered to post bail of $20,000 when arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on charges of possessing narcotics and counterfeit money.

Commissioner Turnage continued the cases for further hearing, but no date was set.

Because Ertel is due to appear in Police Court this morning for an extradition hearing on the murder charge, yesterday's arraignment was a formality. If Ertel is surrendered to New York authorities, local police will not press the narcotic and bogus money counts.

Aides Ousted By Martin Say He Sabotages

U. A. W. Faction Confers With Lewis, Urging Chief's Dismissal.

By the United Press.

Four ousted officers of the United Automobile Workers yesterday charged President Homer Martin with "sabotaging" the union and told Chairman John L. Lewis of the Committee for Industrial Organization a special convention to oust the U. A. W. head "is essential."

They told Lewis during a two and one-half-hour conference that between 80 and 90 per cent of the U. A. W. members oppose their suspension and accused Martin of "raising false issues" in his attack upon them as Communists or Communist sympathizers.

"In reality, there are not 1,000 radicals, including Communists, Lovestoneites, Trotzkyites and Alterites, in our union," said suspended Vice President Richard T. Frankensteen. "Martin hopes to camouflage the real issues through his red-baiting attacks. Martin is joining hands with (Mayor Frank) Hague (of Jersey City) in trying to make out that our organization is controlled by Communists."

The ousted officials—Vice Presidents Frankensteen, Ed Hall, Wyndham Mortimer and Secretary-Treasurer George Addes—would not comment about what Lewis said during the conference and the C. I. O. chieftain had "nothing to say" to the press. Walter N. Wells, another vice president suspended, did not attend the conference. The ousted officers were accompanied by their attorney, Maurice Sugar, of Detroit. C. I. O. General Counsel Lee Pressman also attended the session.

Martin suspended the officers last month on charges they had violated a 20-point harmony program adopted by the U. A. W. executive board. Saturday Addes formally was removed from office and expelled from the union he helped found, on charges of diverting local per capita tax payments from the acting secretary-treasurer, Delmond Garst, to himself. Frankensteen said the trial was a "farce" and that Addes "was railroaded." He also asserted the expulsion was illegal because only 13 board members, friendly to Martin, participated in the trial. He said 17 members constituted a quorum.

The other officers will be tried July 25. They expect expulsion because Martin controls 13 votes.

Claims Ranks' Support.

Lewis, who has refused public comment on the factional fight because the U. A. W. is an autonomous C. I. O. affiliate, probably will be asked to intervene formally in the struggle later this week when he meets a committee of Detroit local union presidents headed by President Earl Talman, of the Hudson local. They have asked reinstatement of the officials.

Frankensteen said that "more than enough" local unions already have petitioned Martin to conduct a referendum for a special convention and added, "but Martin takes no action in violation of the constitution."

The U. A. W. constitution requires that five locals in three States, representing 10 per cent of the membership, must petition for the referendum and that 25 per cent of the membership must vote in the referendums to authorize the convention.

"Our rank and file is too militant to stand for Martin's refusal to obey the constitution. If he doesn't act, he will be responsible for whatever happens," Frankensteen said.

He indicated a "rump" convention might be the result.

Chewning Child Under Knife; Mother Ignores Dad at Bedside

Couzens' Grandson Rushed to D. C. Hospital From Virginia Resort.

William Jeffries Chewning 3d, 7-year-old grandson of the late Senator James Couzens and center of one of the Capital's most sensational divorce cases, was rushed to Washington from Virginia Beach yesterday for an emergency appendicitis operation.

The operation was performed successfully at a local hospital by Dr. John H. Lyons, Washington physician, who was vacationing in Virginia and accompanied the boy and his father, William Chewning, in the wild drive from Virginia Beach. Billy's condition is excellent, according to his parents.

When Chewning and the former Margo Couzens were divorced three years ago, an "amicable settlement" was reached by which Billy and his 4-year-old sister, Margaret Ann, would spend their vacation periods with their father.

Billy had been with his father at the Virginia resort only a few weeks when he became ill. Chewning notified his former wife upon their arrival here yesterday, and Mrs. Chewning hurried to the hospital.

As on former occasions when the children's affairs have brought the estranged couple together, each ignored the other's presence, according to hospital attendants.

The wealthy Senator's daughter eloped with Chewning, then a $25-a-week bank clerk, on the eve of her debut in 1930. The bride was 19. Obtaining a dispensation from Archbishop Michael J. Curley because she is Catholic and Chewning Episcopalian, they were married in Baltimore without Senator Couzens' knowledge.

Ailing Monarch To 'Play More And Work Less'

Strain of His Public Duties Blamed for Illness of George VI.

By the Associated Press.

Windsor, England, July 11.—Less work and more play were indicated today for King George VI in the future as he fought off an attack of gastric influenza.

The public was reassured about the monarch's condition by reports from Windsor that he was improving and the decision of Queen Elizabeth to hold a presentation party in his place at Buckingham Palace tomorrow night.

But his public engagements were canceled and he was ordered to stay in bed and rest for several days to save his strength for the trying visit to Paris next week.

The Queen decided to emerge from mourning for her mother, the Countess of Strathmore, who died June 23, and attend the presentation party to be held for newly married women and others not presented at the full royal courts.

The King is planning to take up golf actively again.

He is having a nine-hole course built on the Buckingham Palace grounds.
